GOLD PAYMENT RULING UP TO SUPREME COURT

Base Final Appeal on U. S. Welfare.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 11.—[Special.]—The four gold clause cases in which validity of New Deal monetary tinkering and 69 billion dollars are at stake were taken under advisement by the Supreme court today after Attorney General Homer S. Cummings had indicated anxiety respecting the government's showing.

The tall, soft spoken attorney general, closing with an emotional appeal for the "general welfare," asked leave to reappear before the court reached a decision if the justices thought the government hadn't presented a case.

"If we've left anything unsaid that should have been said on behalf of the government, we'll be glad to come once more before this great tribunal," Cummings declared.

Confession of Weakness.

Veteran members of the bar said they believed such a statement, which they interpreted as tantamount to a confession of weakness, to be without precedent in the nation's highest court.

Mr. Cummings made his appeal in a brief address following an uneasy half hour for the government, during which Assistant Solicitor General Angus MacLean was interrogated sharply by Chief Justice Hughes and Associate Justice Stone. These two liberal members of the bench had joined with the four stalwart conservatives in criticizing the government on the previous day and they spoke with even greater vehemence today.

Chief Justice Hughes, speaking of what he called "the very essence of sovereignty," asked whether as a matter of international law a sovereign power could repudiate its contracts and by implication placed the United States in the same legal status as foreign nations which have defaulted on their war debts to us.

The chief justice, a former member of the permanent court of international relations, seemed to attach much importance to the application of the principles of international law in this case.

Gold Clause Irksome.

The government had fifty minutes in which to conclude its arguments when court opened today, although at the close of yesterday's session counsel indicated that the time might not be used. But Mr. MacLean appeared and at the outset advanced the argument that a government could not bind itself in such a way as to place limitations upon its future sovereignty. Throughout the case the government has contended that the gold clauses in some 100 billion dollars of public and private contracts constituted an obstruction to the power of congress to regulate the value of money.

Congress could not devalue the dollar, an indisputable right, unless it had the further power of abrogating the gold clause contracts, Mr. MacLean contended. Today he advanced the further argument, by implication, that the gold clauses were invalid when made because they limited future sovereignty. Justice Hughes immediately seized upon this contention and soon had Mr. MacLean in an uncomfortable position.

"Isn't it of the very essence of sovereignty for a government to be able to bind itself in a contract to borrow money?" the chief justice asked. "Will not the validity of international loans depend upon the power of a sovereign to bind itself by contract to borrow money and to fix the conditions of the contract? Otherwise the sovereign might not be able to protect itself. International law considers the making of such contracts as very close attributes of sovereignty. You wouldn't say that as a matter of international law a government could repudiate its obligations, would you? Governments cannot go on unless they can make contracts essential to the national defense."

Reference to Bonds.

The chief justice here had reference to the Liberty bonds sold by the government during the world war. John M. Perry is suing for payment in gold or its equivalent on a $10,000 Liberty bond.

MacLean insisted that there was no repudiation, despite the clause providing for payment in gold coin of a certain weight and fineness. It was a substitution of dollars of a different

"LOOK OUT, HUEY, HERE COMES ITS PAPA!"

TUMBLER TELLS HIS FUTURE; HE'S GOING TO DETROIT

Fred La Marche, 30 years old, bartender in L'Aiglon restaurant at 22 East Ontario street, was shot in the left shoulder Jan. 6 by a colored porter with whom he had quarreled. Seriously wounded, he was taken to the Passavant hospital.

Yesterday Chief of Detectives John L. Sullivan received from the Detroit police a set of finger prints of Fred John La Marche, wanted in Detroit for a robbery. Was the wounded Fred the robber Fred? Detroit asked.

Chief Sullivan sent detectives to the hospital. Physicians and nurses refused access to La Marche. A shock might injure him, they said; might even cause death. The detectives went back to Chief Sullivan, who instructed them to go back and get the finger prints somehow.

At the hospital again the detectives borrowed a glass from which La Marche had been drinking. They took this to the bureau of identification, where the chief officer, Emmett Evans, sprinkled the prints on the glass with white powder and examined them. He informed Chief Sullivan that the two La Marches were one. The Detroit police were notified and a guard was stationed over the hospital patient.

Throngs Sigh Over Cripple; Rides in Taxis

The hearts of thousands of loop shoppers during the last few weeks have been softened by the sight of a pathetic cripple, both legs paralyzed, who is pulled about in a little cart by a white Spitz dog.

The cripple sings pathetically, stroking his faithful dog with one hand, and holding out his hat to passersby with the other.

Those who have dropped a coin and a tear for the cripple may be interested in learning where their money goes, as related yesterday by the Central police.

A Wife—in Furs!

And that well dressed woman with the black coat and white fur neckpiece, who is sometimes near him, is the wife whom he supports.

The cripple first came to the attention of Police Commissioner Allman a few days ago in a letter. He suggested that the police keep an eye out for this beggar. Yesterday a policeman on a street car saw him, but before he could reach the cripple the latter had escaped in a taxicab.

But the policeman did collar Frank Wojtecki, 39 years old, of 2917 Central Park avenue.

"Sure, I work for him," Wojtecki said at the police station. "He pays me good wages. Three dollars a day, and we only work about two or three hours. Just long enough for him to go from Jackson boulevard to Madison street, on the east side of State street, and back again on the west side of the street. We take Sundays off, too."

Told When to "Scram."

Wojtecki and the wife of the cripple, who, incidentally, is Frank Mosselle, are the "lookouts."

"I keep an eye out for cops," Wojtecki explained, "when I see one coming, I go over, drop a penny in his hat and say 'Scram.' Then he steers the dog into a store to hide, or maybe grabs a cab, if one is handy."

Wojtecki further explained that he meets the Mosselles at their neat little three room apartment each day, and all three ride down together in a cab—with the dog along, of course. They take the same form of transportation home at night.

The lookout was held for further questioning last night, and First district police were ordered to watch for the cripple if he appears in the loop again.

PILOT BATTLES MADMAN IN AIR; LANDS SAFELY

LIMA, Peru, Jan. 11.—(AP)—An airplane pilot controled his ship with one hand and battled a madman with the other today to bring his craft and passengers to safety at the Pacasmayo airport.

The thirty minute flight between Chiclayo and Pacasmayo aboard the Faucett Air Line plane was one of terror for the passengers and an exhibition of skill on the part of the pilot.

Francisco Samane, employé of the customs house at Port Eten, boarded the craft quietly with his wife, giving no indication of what was to follow. Reserve Captain Carlos Martinez de Pinillos was at the controls. A few minutes after Chiclayo vanished over the northern horizon Samane became insane.

Martinez, without losing control of the plane, overpowered Samane. The other passengers then held him until the plane reached its destination.

DEMAND BANKER GIVE UP $25,000 OR SON WILL DIE

Boston, Mass., Jan. 12 [Saturday].—(AP)—The Boston Post says a demand for $25,000 has been made upon Thomas P. Beal, president of the Second National bank of Boston, with the warning that unless the money is turned over Beal's son, Thomas P. Jr., 6, will be "destroyed."

The demand was made ten days ago, the Post says, and federal agents have the case under investigation.

GIRL SWALLOWS POISON IN OFFICE OF PHYSICIAN

Miss Marie Dwyer, 26 years old, 3009 West Harrison street, was taken to the county hospital last night after she had swallowed poison in the office of Dr. Maurice L. Dale, physician, at 3658 West Harrison street. She told Policemen Arthur March and Fred Murphy, who were sent to the office after Dr. Dale reported the event, that she was in love with the doctor and was despondent because he did not love her.

Dr. Dale said that there had been no affair between them. At the hospital it was said Miss Dwyer's condition did not appear to be serious.

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 11.—[Special.]—One man alone wrote all fourteen notes demanding ransom for the murdered Lindbergh baby, and that one man was Bruno Richard Hauptmann.

This was the positive testimony today of Albert S. Osborn, handwriting expert of many years' standing. Osborn bolstered his statement with lengthy testimony in which he pointed out similarities between samples of Hauptmann's handwriting and the writing in the ransom notes.

He still was on the witness stand when court was adjourned until Monday. Judge Thomas W. Trenchard had hoped to hold court Saturday, but the attorneys representing Hauptmann in his fight against the state's charge that he slew the first born son of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh insisted upon a two day recess.

Defense Experts Map Study.

The defense also has handwriting experts who will testify and these experts have not had an opportunity to examine the many samples of the German carpenter's handwriting.

They will study the specimens during the next two days. In return for this favor the defense stipulated that the state need put on only three of thirty witnesses who would have identified the ransom money from the serial numbers. This will shorten the trial by two days.

The other main witness of the day was Frank Wilson, a special agent of the department of internal revenue, who testified concerning the ransom money.

One of the most important features of Osborn's testimony came when he identified as Hauptmann's the writing on the package containing the sleeping suit of the murdered baby.

This was taken to support the state's contention that Hauptmann was the actual kidnaper and slayer of the child and to dispose of any possible defense intimation that Hauptmann merely may have perpetrated a gigantic hoax, a swindle which cost Col. Lindbergh $50,000.

Identifies Nursery Note.

The expert was just as positive in his statement that Hauptmann wrote the note left in the nursery on the night of the kidnaping.

Osborn, who proved to be a jovial gentleman whose deafness forced all the attorneys to talk very loudly, identified himself as an "examiner of disputed handwritings" with experience of some thirty years.

He has testified as an expert in 39 states and in Canada and England, he asserted in ringing tones, and is the author of two weighty tomes on his subject. The defense did not dispute his qualifications as an expert.

Some Jurors Bewildered.

Some of the jurors, particularly the 260 pound Verna Snyder, looked bewildered as Osborn used such phrases as "emotional development" in describing the various types of handwriting.

The jury was supplied with large, lether bound volumes containing photographic enlargements of Hauptmann's writing as shown in specimens obtained from him and on applications he made for automobile licenses. These were placed side by side with excerpts from the ransom notes.

Hauptmann listened with an interest that was obviously intense. He craned his neck to see as the witness pointed out on a large chart the similarities between the ransom writing and his own handwriting. Col. Lindbergh also was absorbed as the expert explained his labors.

Tells of Examining Notes.

Osborn first saw the fourteen ransom notes in May, 1932, he said, and he examined them repeatedly over a period of two and one-half years.

"During that time more than 100 writings of various suspects were brought to me," he said.

"What conclusion did you reach concerning them?" he was asked by Joseph Lanigan, assistant state's at-

Miss Earhart Tries 3d Ocean Crossing by Air

BULLETIN.

Oakland, Cal., Jan. 11.—(AP)—The first direct message here from Amelia Earhart's Honolulu to California plane was picked up by the department of commerce radio station at the Oakland airport at 11:50 p. m. (1:50 a. m. Chicago time Saturday). Miss Earhart said she was flying at 3,000 foot elevation through fog. She gave no position.

BULLETIN.

HONOLULU, T. H., Jan. 11.—(AP)—"Everything fine, weather fair," said Amelia Earhart Putnam at 7:45 o'clock tonight (12:45 a. m. Chicago time Saturday) as she sped on her solo flight from Hawaii to California. Her position was not given.

Navy radio men asked her to change her wave length because of static. She subsequently was heard on the changed frequency, but reception was incomplete.

[Copyright: 1935: By the Associated Press.]

HONOLULU, Jan. 11.—Amelia Earhart Putnam, only woman to fly alone across the Atlantic, challenged the Pacific tonight. She took off on a projected 2,400 mile flight to California—a stretch never flown "solo" by any flyer.

Undaunted by a heavy downpour of rain that made Wheeler field heavy with mud, the former Chicago woman, a graduate of Hyde Park High school, ascended at 4:15 p. m. [9:15 p. m. Chicago standard time], forced her heavily loaded plane upward and streaked out directly toward Oakland.

Weather Appears Favorable.

Flying almost on the heels of a storm, Miss Earhart appeared to be heading for clearer skies. Naval weather reports said conditions were clearing on her route. Unsettled weather prevailed off the northern California coast, however.

All day Paul Mantz, Miss Earhart's technical adviser, and George Palmer Putnam, her publisher husband, worked to make ready for the flight—an undertaking accomplished only once before from the west to east.

At 2 p. m. a downpour struck Wheeler field and the situation looked unfavorable for an immediate start, but the famous aviatrix declined to change her plans. Two hours later her ship, a Lockheed-Vega monoplane, already loaded with 522 gallons of gasoline and elaborate radio and safety equipment, was rolled from its hangar. It was given a ten minute warmup and Miss Earhart climbed in.

Plane Falters at Start.

With a wave of her hand, Miss Earhart ordered a field crew to take the blocks from the front wheels and she shot down the runway.

The plane, weighing 5,800 pounds over all, got off the heavy field after a 3,000 foot run. It faltered for a moment then, but she drove it hard and it began to climb as it gathered speed. Six minutes after the takeoff she was 2,000 feet up and speeding for Diamond head, last point of land on the long trek.

Putnam immediately announced that Miss Earhart would definitly continue on toward California unless she returned to Wheeler field within thirty minutes from the takeoff. During the takeoff from the muddy field Putnam appeared worried. Perspiring, he said: "I'd rather have a baby."

Says She's Well Prepared.

"Sixty per cent of the success of any expedition lies in its preparation," Miss Earhart said before the takeoff, "and I feel that I am prepared. I certainly anticipate no trouble."

It was just a year ago today that

PIQUETT FIGHTS U. S. VERSION OF DILLINGER PLOT

Lawyer in Turbulent 3 Hours on Stand.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

Attorney Louis Piquett fought desperately on the witness stand in Federal Judge William H. Holly's courtroom for three hours yesterday in an effort to clear himself from the avalanche of evidence brought upon his head by the government, which is seeking to send him to prison for harboring and concealing his late client, John Dillinger.

In the course of his story, which was on the whole an admission of much of the prosecution testimony, but with a different interpretation placed upon his acts, he pictured Dillinger in a new rôle. The public enemy No. 1 was described to the jury as a hunted and frightened man, with no place to lay his head, getting ready to surrender to the Indiana authorities before he was shot and killed by government agents last July 22 in Chicago.

Court was adjourned until Monday morning with the defense seeking one more witness. Piquett may be recalled to the stand and the government is expected to have some rebuttal testimony. He will argue his own case, which probably will go to the jury Monday evening.

Tells "Surrender Plan."

Piquett in his testimony yesterday put himself in the rôle of one who was seeking to bring about Dillinger's surrender. He had planned to do it, he said, through the aid of newspaper men, so that the order of Attorney General Cummings to shoot Dillinger on sight might not be carried out.

The discrepancy between this reported attitude of Dillinger and his efforts to escape detection by having his face lifted and his finger tips altered was brought out by the prosecution in cross-examination, but Piquett clung to his story with the desperation of a drowning man clinging to a floating plank.

Piquett told several new episodes in the life of Dillinger in Chicago after his escape last March 3 from the Lake county [Ind.] jail at Crown Point, where he has awaiting trial for murder. He disclosed that he saw Dillinger twice in Chicago on the day of the escape, once half a block from the Town Hall police station, and he told the jury that he advised Dillinger to give himself up to the law which he could never defeat.

Denies Arranging Operations.

Piquett admitted that he knew of the face lifting operations by Dr. Wilhelm Loeser and Dr. Harold B. Cassidy in the bungalow of James Probasco at 2509 North Crawford avenue early last May, but denied that he had arranged for this hiding place or had accepted money for his part in this conspiracy.

He admitted that $3,000 was paid to him at the home of Dr. Loeser, 536 Wrightwood avenue, after the operations had been performed, but insisted that this money was for legal services to Dillinger.

In an effort to bolster his story he brought in the name of Judge William J. Murray of Crown Point, declaring that he had discussed the matter of Dillinger's surrender with the judge last May in the Ford building at A Century of Progress, and had been assured of leniency for his client. This was denied soon afterward by Judge Murray in a statement made at Crown Point.

Murray Repeats Denial Here.

Later in the day Judge Murray came to Chicago and conferred with United States Attorney Dwight H. Green, to whom he is said to have repeated his denial. Though it was thought likely Judge Murray would be put on the stand as a rebuttal witness for the government, federal prosecutors would not confirm it.

Informed of Judge Murray's statement Defense Attorney Peifer said he could say nothing without conferring with his client.

"Were you afraid of Dillinger?" Piquett was asked in the course of cross-examination by J. Albert Woll, assistant to the United States attorney general.

"Not Afraid of Dillinger."

"No, not physically," said Piquett, "but I felt as though I did not want to surrender him."

At the last, he said, Dillinger did not trust him and thought there was a plot. Piquett blamed Arthur O'Leary, his former investigator, for this. He described O'Leary as "Dillinger's messenger" and intimated that much went on between him and the outlaw which his attorney did not know.

He said that O'Leary had been abused by the federal men at the time of his arrest last August and told of a conversation with O'Leary in the patrol wagon in which O'Leary said he was forced to make certain statements but would tell the truth on the witness stand.

Charges Torture by Agents.

He said he saw evidence of cigaret burns on O'Leary's face where, he intimated, the federal agents had tortured him. As for his own treatment, he said that he was given cigars and "treated royally."

Evelyn Frechette, Dillinger's sweetheart, was in Piquett's law office on the morning of the break from the Crown Point jail, Piquett admitted. She was there at 9:30 o'clock in the morning, the time of the escape and about the time that Piquett had been informed by telephone of what had happened.

Q.—Where did you see him next? A.—At 4 o'clock that afternoon I saw Dillinger in a car, a small black late model car, on Belmont avenue. There was a colored man in the back seat lying down [Piquett indicated a crouching position. This was evidently Herbert Youngblood, who escaped with Dillinger and who later was slain.]

Sees Dillinger Second Time.

Q.—When did you next get in touch with him? A.—That afternoon I met a fellow in front of my house who told me where Dillinger was. I never saw the man before. Dillinger was out on Halsted street. There were two women there. One was Evelyn Frechette.

Q.—Did you inform the law? A.—I did not.

There was objection to this line of questioning and the court said: "It is not required of a lawyer to surrender his client or even inform the law of his whereabouts."

Dillinger paid $500 for the defense of Evelyn on a charge of harboring him, Piquett said, but the money went to O'Leary and Piquett never saw it.

In May, he said, he got $1,000 from Evelyn out at the airport as she was about to board a plane. He was told that "Johnny sent this on account."

He admitted on close questioning that he had asked a fee of $10,000 to defend Dillinger in the Crown Point case.

PIQUETT TELLS HIS LIFE

Attorney Piquett went on the witness stand at the opening of the morning session. He was examined by his attorney, Henry E. Pieruccini. He gave his age as 51 and in answer to a question on his occupation he said:

"I practice law. I specialize in criminal law."

He was born in Wisconsin, the son of a blacksmith, and left school at the eighth grade to go to California. In 1906 he returned to Wisconsin.

"I married a little girl from home, and am still living with her," he said. His wife, sitting in the courtroom, began to weep.

Law Studies at Night.

"I waited on tables, tended bar, washed dishes, studied at night," Piquett said. "I got into politics in the old Twenty-first ward and assisted in the election of a mayor of Chicago [Thompson]. I was appointed chief clerk in the city prosecutor's office, and when I was admitted to the bar this mayor made me city prosecutor. After the second term of this mayor I went into private practice at 100 North La Salle street and moved from there to 228 North La Salle."

Q.—[By Mr. Pieruccini]—When did you first meet Dillinger? A.—About Feb. 1, 1934, I had a call from Warden Baker of the Crown Point jail. He said that Dillinger wanted to see me. I went to the jail and discussed his defense with him. There was a difference about finances. Later I got another call and Dillinger asked me to sit in on the arraignment. [Dillinger was awaiting trial on a charge of killing a policeman in an East Chicago bank holdup.] I then went in to represent him. I thought I had at least a chance to save his life in the East Chicago murder charge.

Hears News of Escape.

Q.—When did you hear of his escape? A.—On March 3, at 9:30 o'clock in the morning in my office. A nephew called me up.

Q.—Did you see him after his escape? A.—Yes, at 4 p. m. that same day on the near north side. He called my office and they told him where I was. We only talked a minute or two and I met him again at 8 o'clock that same night half a block from the Town Hall police station on Halsted street.

Q.—What was your conversation? A.—It was the question of his surrendering. I told him it was impossible for him to defeat the law. I told him it was my duty to advise him to surrender and to let me take him to Town Hall station. He said he would do it later. He didn't do it.

Q.—Did he show you his wooden gun? A.—He did, and told me all about his escape.

Piquett's next contact with Dillinger was while he was at the Willard hotel in Washington, D. C. This was April 9 or 10.

"A voice that I believed to be that of Dillinger told me that Billy had been arrested," he said. [Billy was Evelyn Frechette.]

"This voice told me that she had been arrested in Chicago and that he had been in a car and had sent her out with a message when the government men grabbed her. He left in the car."

Piquett said that he instructed Attorney Paul Pomeroy in Chicago to get up a writ of habeas corpus for the Frechette girl and he came home in a day or two. Dillinger, he said, then asked him to represent the girl in a hearing at St. Paul, where she was accused of harboring Dillinger. Piquett handled this case and said he paid out $2,000 to St. Paul associates. The girl was convicted.

Questions About Dillinger.

Q.—Did you know James Probasco? A.—Yes, I have known him for fifteen years. I went out to the county jail one day in May to see Boss McLaughlin [John J. McLaughlin, Chicago politician charged with complicity in the Bremer kidnaping at St. Paul] and met Probasco there. He said he wanted to see me and came to my office next day. He then asked me what kind of a man Dillinger was, whether he could be trusted. He said a man named Jimmy on the west side had asked him to find a place for Dillinger to stay. I told him that Dillinger was public enemy No. 1 and that he better not have anything to do with it, that Dillinger might be trailed to his house and the place would be surrounded and there would be trouble. Arthur O'Leary heard part of that conversation. Probasco said there was $40 or $50 a day in it to allow Dillinger to stay at his house.

Piquett admitted that he had made several visits to the Probasco house at 2509 North Crawford avenue while Dillinger was there. He told Dillinger, he said, that he had discussed his surrender with responsible people. He talked about the Frechette case.

Questions Judge Murray.

Q.—Did you ever talk with Judge Murray of Crown Point? A.—Yes, in May, at A Century of Progress, I met him at the Ford building. O'Leary and his wife were there and also Mrs. Piquett. I asked Judge Murray what he would do if Dillinger came back and was tried before him and the death penalty was returned. He said he would commute this to life imprisonment as he did not believe that Dillinger killed O'Malley [William O'Malley, the policeman slain in the East Chicago robbery]. Two or three days later I told Dillinger of this.

It was Probasco, Piquett said, who was responsible for putting the idea of plastic surgery in Dillinger's head. It was Probasco who asked Piquett if he knew of a reputable doctor who would do this job. It was Probasco who suggested Dr. Loeser. [Probasco is dead. He was killed last July 26 in a fall from a window of a 19th floor office of federal agents in the loop.]

"I knew about Dr. Loeser's work," Piquett admitted. "I introduced O'Leary to Dr. Loeser. I did not know when it was performed. O'Leary told me about that."

Q.—Did you receive money from O'Leary? A.—I received $3,000 for my St. Paul expenses, although it was paid in this plastic surgery job. Dillinger gave it to O'Leary to give to me for my fee. Dillinger asked me later if I had received it.

Q.—Did you see Dillinger again before he was killed? A.—Yes, I saw him at the Cubs baseball park. I met him coming in as I was going out. He said "Hello, Counsel." A policeman saw him and asked me who he was. I said: "A fellow I know down on Chicago avenue."

Q.—Did you have another conversation with Dillinger before he left Probasco's. A.—Yes, he had promised to surrender after the Frechette case, and he seemed alarmed about a story in the papers where Attorney General Cummings advised his men to shoot Dillinger on sight. I took the matter of surrender up with a reporter for a newspaper. It was a question of which state to surrender in. I decided on Crown Point and I wanted newspaper men to be there, in their official capacity. I was satisfied that Dillinger would not be killed then. I talked this over with Nate Gross, a reporter.

Dillinger Grows Distrustful.

Dillinger left Probasco's early in June. Piquett said he did not see him again until his death.

"O'Leary told me," he said, "that Dillinger didn't think I was so hot. He was afraid I was laying a trap for him. At the latter part he did not trust me. I would sell him the idea of surrendering and O'Leary would unsell it."

Piquett then denied all parts of the O'Leary-Loeser-Cassidy story which put him in the position of arranging for the hiding place and the operations, and also denied the payments of money to him except as a legal fee. He admitted he had told Dr. Cassidy to return to the Probasco house to see Dillinger. The operation, he said, was a failure and did not change Dillinger.

Assails Surgery as Poor.

"He looked like he had been in a dog fight," said Piquett.

The lawyer denied the story of Anna Patzke, Dr. Loeser's paramour, in which she told of a payment of $500 by Piquett to keep Loeser quiet. Piquett denied that he had ever given the woman a five cent piece, but admitted visits to her house in Oak Park.

"I told her," he said, "to tell the doctor to tell the truth."

He distrusted the woman, he said, and had a George Ackerman with him during interviews which she described, at the time government agents were hiding upstairs. He denied having ever been in a drinking party with Dillinger, Homer Van Meter and Baby Face Nelson, as charged by O'Leary in his testimony Thursday.

Attempts of the defense to impeach the testimony of O'Leary and to show that Piquett sought to surrender Dillinger were halted by Judge Holly upon the objections of the government.

Nathan L. Gross, reporter for an afternoon newspaper, was allowed to tell of meeting O'Leary and Piquett on a number of occasions, but testimony concerning his conversations with Piquett was barred.

Attorney Paul Pomeroy was called and excused when the government objected. He also was to have told of Piquett's statement that he wished to surrender Dillinger to Indiana authorities.

AIDING 'BABY FACE' NELSON CHARGED TO FLYER HELD IN RENO

Reno, Nev., Jan. 11.—(AP)—Federal agents, moving swiftly in their drive to round up suspected aids of the late George [Baby Face] Nelson, today arrested Frank B. Cochran, widely known Reno aviator and garage proprietor, placed his wife, Anna, in technical custody, and announced "others may be arrested later."

Cochran, 50, was charged with conspiracy to harbor Nelson during the gangster's secret sojourn in Nevada and California a month before his death at the hands of federal agents at Chicago last Nov. 28.

Mrs. Cochran was questioned in the offices of United States District Attorney E. P. Carville, who said he expected to formally name her as a party to the alleged conspiracy.

Department of justice agents have been active on the Nelson case in Reno for several months.

A luxurious motor car which allegedly was the property of a reported Nelson associate, John Chase, was seized in Cochran's garage. It was kept there, under surveillance, for months as a possible trap for Nelson, Chase or other members of the late J. .n Dillinger's ill fated gang. Chase is now under arrest in Chicago.

Indiana Judge Denies Offer to Spare Dillinger's Life

Judge William J. Murray of Crown Point denied yesterday that he had ever discussed with Attorney Louis Piquett the possibility of the lawyer's surrendering John Dillinger. The denial came after Attorney Piquett had testified in the federal court here that he had opened such negotiations in a meeting with Judge Murray last summer at A Century of Progress.

"If Piquett said I had promised to commute Dillinger's sentence in case of conviction he is a liar," Judge Murray said. "I will be glad to appear in the federal court if my testimony is wanted. I am also told that Piquett testified that I told him that I believed Dillinger innocent. I naturally never made any such statement. The first duty of a judge is to keep an open mind in any case."

Piquett "Ignorant of Law."

Piquett's ignorance of the laws of Indiana was responsible for his testimony concerning the promised commutation, Judge Murray said. He pointed out that the death sentence is mandatory in Indiana when a jury returns a guilty verdict in a first degree murder case. Dillinger was charged with the slaying of a policeman during a bank holdup in East Chicago.

Judge Murray said that he encountered Piquett in a chance meeting at the Ford exhibit at A Century of Progress. The judge said that he did not remember the exact date of the meeting.

Surprised at Escape.

"I told Piquett that I hadn't seen him since Dillinger got out," Judge Murray said. "Attorney Piquett said that he 'was the most surprised man in the world' at news of the escape. Then he said: 'But they'll catch him again, and when they do I want to try him before you and a Lake county jury as I am convinced that he would get a fair and impartial trial.' That ended the interview.

"About a month ago Piquett telephoned me at my chambers and asked me if I remembered the conversation at the Fair. He said that he was building his defense in the federal case and wanted to know if I remembered his telling me that he would surrender Dillinger if I would commute his sentence to life in case of conviction.

"I told him that I recalled no conversation of that sort, and added that no such statement had been made by him. He reiterated that he was building his defense. I told him that I didn't doubt that, but that no such conversation as he mentioned had taken place."

DILLINGER'S RAGINGS AFTER 'FACE LIFTING' RELATED BY PIQUETT

John Dillinger didn't like his "new face" and for a time appeared ready to shoot every one connected with the plastic surgery that had changed his features, Louis Piquett testified yesterday in his trial before Federal Judge William H. Holly on charges of harboring and concealing the outlaw.

Dillinger apparently was furious and spared no words in expressing his dissatisfaction when he looked at himself in a mirror.

"Did you tell him it looked all right?" inquired J. Albert Woll, assistant to the United States attorney general.

"I tried to cheer him up," replied Piquett. "He acted like he was going to shoot everybody and I tried to tone him down. I told him he looked wonderful."

"And after that you were paid the money?"

"Yes, after I told him he looked fine."

RAILWAY LABOR EXECUTIVES HEAR EASTMAN TODAY

Joseph B. Eastman, federal coordinator of railroads, will speak before members of the Railway Labor Executives' association at 2 o'cock today in the Morrison hotel, where the association is holding its annual convention.

What Mr. Eastman has to tell the labor leaders will have a large measure of influence on the legislative program which was being drawn up yesterday by a committee of the association, its members said.

The primary objective of most of the proposals under consideration is to increase employment of railroad labor. According to statistics released yesterday by the association, the railroads are employing fewer members of the twenty-one standard rail labor unions than they did at the depth of the depression. Employment then amounted to 993,000, whereas it is only 976,000 today. In prosperous days some 2,000,000 members of the unions had jobs.

Before the legislative committee are proposals for a six hour day, a reduction of the number of successive hours a man may work from 16 to 12, and legislation shortening freight trains and providing for minimum crews of five men.

Vote Favors Strike Power for Coal Teamster Heads

Ballots sent to members of the Coal Teamsters union are being returned with a large majority in favor of empowering the officers to call a walkout and negotiate terms, it was reported yesterday by Milton Booth Jr., head of the organization. The union men are asking for a return to the scale of $7 a day, which was reduced to $6 last March, and a guarantee of a "reasonable number" of hours.

ELEVATOR UNION IN GRIP OF GANG, STATE CHARGES

Hunt Klondike O'Donnell in Terror Bombing.

State's attorney's detectives last night were investigating charges that William [Klondike] O'Donnell, heading a remnant of the old Capone gang, has extracted $7,000 in tribute from the Elevator Operators and Starters' union, local 66, by terroristic methods in the last two years.

A search for O'Donnell was started after investigators had raided the union office in room 1603, 159 North State street, seized books and records, and held three union officials for questioning. The officials are Matt Taylor, president; Thomas O'Grady, secretary, and Thomas O'Brien, business agent.

Climax of Long Inquiry.

Capt. Daniel Gilbert, chief investigator for the state's attorney, who headed the raiding squad, said the raid climaxed more than a year and a half of investigation of union affairs. The first clew of hoodlum domination of the elevator operators' union came, Capt. Gilbert said, when a notorious gangland headquarters at 1 North La Salle street, was raided.

A number of hoodlums were seized at that time and evidence was found that aided the state's attorney in investigation of the Trucking and Transportation exchange.

Blames Hoodlums in Bombing.

Capt. Gilbert intimated also that the recent bombing of the Drive tavern, 212 North Wabash avenue, was motivated by the O'Donnell reign of union affairs. Failure of union officials to meet a demand by hoodlums for $3,000 shortly before Christmas was blamed.

The bomb was directed against the Drive tavern, Capt. Gilbert said, because O'Brien, the union business agent, is part owner of the business.

Union officials denied vigorously that they had been forced by threats and terrorism to pay money to O'Donnell. Capt. Gilbert said that he had learned that the union contingent fund, established to pay sick benefits to the 3,000 union members, had been used to satisfy gangland demand.

Investigate New Bombing.

At the same time, State's Attorney Courtney ordered a thorough investigation of the bombing of the Paris Linen Service, Inc., 1914 West North avenue, early yesterday. The bomb, exploded with damage of $150, was set off shortly before dawn.

While the owners declined to make a statement, it was learned that the company is not a member of the Linen Supply association.

State's Attorney Courtney announced that several complaints had reached him of late and that this and other bombings would be given full attention.

Ring Stolen in 1932 Returns Mysteriously to Its Owner

On Dec. 19, 1932, Mrs. Hazel Waid, an employé of the Morrison hotel, complained to the Central police that a diamond ring, valued at $1,000, had been stolen from her. For more than two years the police watched pawnshops, but the ring, which had a sentimental value to Mrs. Waid, could not be found. Yesterday a young woman walked into the hotel lobby and handed a box to a bellboy for delivery to Mrs. Waid. She opened it and there was the ring, returned without any explanation.

AMELIA EARHART FLYING PACIFIC

AMELIA EARHART HOPS FOR U. S. FROM HONOLULU

Tries Third Crossing of Sea by Air.

Several times the great water expanse between the California mainland and Hawaii has been spanned by planes, but Sir Charles Kingsford-Smith and Capt. P. G. Taylor are the only ones to have flown from the islands to the mainland. They made this flight last November.

Ten persons have lost their lives attempting to negotiate the westward passage.

Carries Elaborate Equipment.

San Francisco, Cal., Jan. 11.—(AP)—In case of a forced landing on her projected trans-Pacific flight, Amelia Earhart Putnam planned to depend for survival upon the finest life saving equipment ever carried on any flight over the longest all over water air lane in the world.

The gasoline tanks on her red monoplane had fast acting dump valves to empty quickly all remaining fuel, turning the tanks into air tight buoyancy chambers capable of keeping the plane afloat as long as it held together.

The tail carried an air cruiser life raft with capsules of compressed air capable of inflating it in two seconds. Beside her hand in the cockpit Miss Earhart had a small hatchet for use in breaking away tail surfaces for release of the craft.

Carries Signal Balloon.

Mounted on the raft was a brilliantly colored balloon with a hydrogen capsule to inflate it. Released, the balloon would rise to the end of a 100 foot fishline as conspicuous signal for searching craft. A Very pistol and flares were included for use at night.

In addition, Miss Earhart wore a deflated "life preserver" vest of double compartment construction, almost weightless and giving freedom of action in the plane, but which could be inflated with compressed air cartridges in the water. The double compartment was a precaution against accidental puncture, either half having sufficient "lift" to support her weight in the water.

In case of accident, it was pointed out the weight of the motor would draw the nose of the ship under water, so the life vest might be necessary to help her reach the tail area, held up by the empty gas tanks, where the life raft and provisions were stored.

Food supplies, highly condensed, were supplemented by tomato juice, the beverage she has used on all her previous flights.

Four cutters were ordered to sea tonight by the coast guard commandant with instructions to stand by and give any assistance needed by Miss Earhart.

MRS. J. B. WALLER GIVEN A DIVORCE AND $600 A MONTH

In a ten minute court hearing yesterday Mrs. Sarah Given Waller, 640 Waveland avenue, was granted an uncontested divorce from James B. Waller, 1365 Astor street, wealthy real estate operator, member of a well known Chicago family.

Mrs. Waller testified before Superior Judge Rudolph F. Desort that they were married Sept. 1, 1925, in Manchester, Vt., and he deserted her Aug. 20, 1933. Waller was alderman of the 43d ward from 1931 to 1933. He is the brother of Mrs. John Alden Carpenter. Mrs. Waller is the daughter of John L. Given of New York City.

Mrs. Waller was awarded custody of their two children, James B. Jr., 8 years old, and Robert, 6, both pupils of the Todd private school in Woodstock. Waller will be permitted to see them whenever he wishes.

Attorney Arthur Goldblatt disclosed that in lieu of alimony Waller had agreed to pay the children's tuition of $1,800 a year and to pay his wife $600 a month for her and the children's support. He also gave her a mortgage on the Pattington apartments at Pine Grove avenue and Irving Park boulevard as security of a loan made by her to him, the amount of which Goldblatt would not disclose.

NIGHT IN A CELL SPURS MEMORY ABOUT MR. FISH

Anthony Robackowski, 1423 Wrightwood avenue, who spent a night in jail after he said he could not recall the name of a man whom he had asked to "fix" a ticket for trafic violation, had a partial return of memory yesterday when he appeared again before Judge John Gutknecht in the Trafic court.

"I remember now that I gave the ticket to a fellow named Fish," Robackowski said.

"What's his first name?" Judge Gutknecht asked.

"I don't remember," Robackowski answered. "I just knew him as Fish."

"We can probably find him at the Lincoln park aquarium," the judge commented. He released Rabackowski and ordered a search for the mysterious Fish.

The ticket was originally received by Frank Koss, 19 years old, 2657 Southport avenue, who did not appear when the case was called Thursday. Summoned into court by Judge Gutknecht, Koss said he understood the ticket was "fixed." He couldn't recall whom he had asked to "take care" of it and was given the jail treatment for two hours. After that his memory improved and he said he had given the ticket to Robackowski, who passed it on. Koss was fined $10 yesterday.

JOB INSURANCE, PENSION PLANS NEARLY DRAWN

Congress to Get Program Next Week.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 11.—[Special.] — President Roosevelt today cleared the way for presentation of his four-point social security program to congress early next week.

Following a White House conference at which the President and his cabinet and congressional advisers charted their line of action, Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins announced that Mr. Roosevelt will call on congress to enact four measures.

Calls for Four Measures.

These measures are:

1. Unemployment insurance financed by "contributions" from employers with or without state aid, but without any financial help from the federal government.

2. Old age pensions financed by the federal government in coöperation with the states and a separate system of old age insurance financed by workers themselves without federal aid.

3. Aid to the under-privileged, such as homeless, sickly, or handicapped children and to indigent mothers; financed with federal aid.

4. Health insurance or benefits of a rudimentary type.

Byrns Estimates Cost.

Because the President's program restricts federal financial aid to the old age pension system and to the benefits for dependents, the cost of the social security program to the federal government during its first year will be about 100 million dollars, Speaker Joseph Byrns [Dem., Tenn.], one of the congressional leaders at today's White House conference, estimated.

The consuming public must bear the rest of the program's cost, estimated as high as a billion dollars a year, Senator Frederick Van Nuys [Dem., Ind.], another participant in the White House discussions, said. Senator Van Nuys pointed out that President Roosevelt's program calls for the bulk of the money to come from levies, either as "contributions" or taxes, on employers. These levies, he explained, will be passed on to the consumer.

About one cent will be added to every dollar of a finished article's cost by the costs of the vast social insurance program, according to Senator Van Nuys.

Amounts Not Specified.

Secretary Perkins stressed the facts that the federal government will not specify the amounts to be paid to the unemployed under unemployment insurance or to the aged under old age pensions. Size of these payments will be left up to the state laws to determine, but the federal law will lay down certain minimum standards below which the state laws cannot go.

Old age pension of between $40 and $50 a month for dependent persons over 60 years of age is reported to be the minimum required in President Roosevelt's program, but Miss Perkins would only laugh when asked to confirm the report.

On unemployment insurance President Roosevelt's advisory committee recommended that an idle worker receive half pay, but not in excess of $15 a week, for 25 weeks after losing his job, but it is not known whether President Roosevelt adopted this suggestion of a minimum standard for the states to meet.

Affects Those Over 65.

Secretary Perkins stressed the segregation of old age pensions and old age insurance. The pension plan, financed with federal aid to any state setting up a state pension law, will embrace all dependent persons now over 65 years of age. It will be an outright grant arrangement. The old age insurance funds will be built up like any other insurance by premiums paid by workers who are now under 65 years of age.

These broad outlines of the President's plan were laid before the congressional leaders at the White House today, and a plan for putting the legislation through congress was agreed upon. Those attending the conference were Senator Robert F. Wagner [Dem., N. Y.], Senator Van Nuys, Speaker Byrns, Representative David J. Lewis [Dem., Md.], Secretary Perkins, and Assistant Secretary of Labor Edward McGrady.

President Roosevelt, it is understood, will not send an actual bill embodying all his social insurance plans to congress but will submit a special message outlining his objectives and also Secretary Perkins' special report in which she outlines the methods to be used in achieving the objectives. Both the message and report are expected to go to congress early next week.

ROMAN SOCIETY GREETS PRINCESS AND MATE-TO-BE

Couple Presented by Alfonso of Spain.

BY DAVID DARRAH.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, Jan. 11.—Luxuriously liveried carriages filled with the élite of Roman aristocracy arrived and departed all this evening at the Eternal city's leading hostelry, where former King Alfonso of Spain gave the first of a series of brilliant receptions to present officially his daughter, Infanta Beatriz, and her husband to be, Prince Alessandro Torlonia, to Roman societ

The couple will be married Monday in the church of the Jesuits here by Cardinal Segura before King Victor Emmanuel and Queen Elena of Italy, former King Alfonso, and fifty Italian and Spanish princes of royal blood. Uncertainty exists as to whether former Queen Victoria of Spain will be present, in view of recent reports of a pending legal separation between her and Alfonso.

Groom Half American.

Alessandro is half American, his mother being the former Elsie Moore of New York. He was educated at Princeton university and at Pomfret school, Pomfret, Conn. His father w the late Don Marino Torlonia.

Three thousand Spanish grandees and aristocrats are here or are coming to Rome to attend the wedding.

In the former king's entourage it was said that Infanta Beatriz would look like a picture by Velasquez when she becomes Alessandro's bride. She will wear a simple lace dress with a train seven yards long, which will be carried by two children of Prince Chigi's family dressed in red velvet.

Marriage Act Signed.

During the reception Beatriz and her intended husband, together with Alfonso and witnesses to the marriage, retired to a private salon and put their final signatures to the marriage act. Accompanying this was a written document which Beatriz gave her father renouncing all claims to the throne of Spain, which, according to Spanish custom, can also be inherited by women.

It was announced that Beatriz will wear two precious sets of jewels at the marriage which are gifts of her father. One is the earrings of the famous Empress Maria Theresa of Austria and the other is a string of pearls formerly belonging to Queen Maria Christina of Spain, Alfonso's mother. The gifts include twelve pounds of pearls.

ETHIOPIAN EMPEROR SENDS APPEAL TO KING OF ITALY IN DISPUTE

ROME, Jan. 11.—(AP)—Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia went over Premier Mussolini's head today to handle the Italo-Ethiopian dispute in Africa as one king to another.

Writing directly to King Victor Emmanuel, the Ethiopian monarch outlined his government's viewpoint on the situation growing out of recent border clashes between Italian and Ethiopian forces, which the Addis Ababa government previously had called to the attention of the league of nations.

Negadras Yesus, the Ethiopian chargé d'affaires here, presented the letter and received the Italian king's assurance that Italy wanted peace with its African neighbor.

3 Women Identify Man Seized on Rape Charges

Police of the Chicago Lawn station yesterday received an anonymous letter stating that Thomas McCarthy, 5527 South Lincoln street, was the moron who had attempted to rape several women in the last few weeks. McCarthy, who is 28 years old, was arrested by Sergt. John McGurk last night. A short time later three women identified him as having attempted to rape them.

Woman, 50, Hangs Self in Private Sanitarium

Tying the cord of her bathrobe to the back of a bed Mrs. Lillian Salomon, 50 years old, 1309 North Oakley avenue, hanged herself early today in the private sanitarium of Dr. Alexander B. Magnus at 2720 Prairie avenue, where she was a patient. From Dr. Magnus the police learned that Mrs. Salomon, suffering from depression, had been in the sanitarium for several weeks.

RUSSIAN COTTON CHIEF OUSTED AS ENEMY OF RULE

Kirov Killing Leads to Dismissal.

MOSCOW, Jan. 11.—(AP)—Sergei Kirov's assassination at Leningrad Dec. 31—for which 117 persons have paid with their lives—today led to the discharge and expulsion from the communist party of I. Reingold, chief of the agriculture commissariat's cotton department.

The action against Reingold was taken, it was announced, because of his association with L. Faivilovich, his assistant in the cotton department, who was arrested in connection with the murder.

Linked with Trotzky.

An announcement of Reingold's expulsion said he had kept closely in touch with the Zinoviev-Trotzky opposition to the soviet, which investigators linked with the assassination, during eight years.

Contact was maintained, it was asserted, through Faivilovich, whom Reingold made head of the irrigation department as well as his assistant in the cotton division.

The ousted communist also was charged with having harbored seven other oppositionists and given them employment, with the result that the cotton department "contained too much rotten liberalism."

Sabotage Is Charged.

During the current crop year the soviet has experienced great difficulty in keeping the cotton production of the central Asian districts up to standard, especially in Uzbekistan, where thirty cotton farmers have been shot for "sabotaging" the crop by planting other crops in violation of the soviet plan.

The drive against saboteurs resulted in the sentencing to death today of Gabriel Mitiakin, manager of the warehouse of the waste material trust, who was convicted of stealing 150,000 rubles (nominally worth about $75,000) of soviet funds.

FARMER CLAIMS HIGHWAY; SETS UP BARRICADES

Court Upholds His Right to Ownership.

Cook county motorists yesterday lost the use of a half mile stretch of the new Southwest highway, just north of Chicago Ridge in Worth township.

Henry Ipena, Oak Lawn farmer, claimed the section of road as his property, barricaded it, posted it with "no trespassing" signs, and stationed armed guards at both ends with instructions to shoot if necessary. He announced he would keep possession of the road until the county agrees to reimburse him for it.

Drivers Forced to Detour.

Meanwhile automobile drivers were forced to detour, and Clayton F. Smith, president of the county board, admitted he was in a quandary. He announced last night that he would call a meeting of officials this morning to decide on a plan of action. It will be attended by Maj. George E. Quinlan, chief engineer for the board; Daniel Ryan, head of the county roads and bridges department, and members of the county board.

The difficulty which gave rise to yesterday's climax dates back to 1929 when Ipena sold 40 acres of his farm to a syndicate for which the People's National Bank and Trust company was trustee.

Gets Land by Foreclosure.

Attorney Otto Wielgorecki of Blue Island, representing Ipena, who is confined to his home by illness, said the syndicate paid $18,000 down and gave a mortgage for $28,000 for the remainder of the purchase price. They defaulted the interest in 1930, he said; Ipena began foreclosure proceedings in 1931, and a few months ago obtained a master's deed for the property.

In the meantime the syndicate had subdivided the property and dedicated a portion of it as the right of way for the Southwest highway, which was built in 1930. The section traversing Ipena's land is a strip 100 feet wide, extending from 97th street and Meade avenue, southwest to 99th street and Melvina avenue. The strip is about 2,600 feet long and contains about ten acres, Wielgorecki said. The 40 foot concrete pavement across the land was laid at an estimated cost of $70,000.

Wants "Fair Price" for Land.

Ipena contends that the land was dedicated without his consent as holder of the mortgage and therefore the county's supposed title is void. He asserts that he is legally entitled to a fair price for his land, plus the value of the improvements. He estimates the land to be worth $1,250 an acre.

Thus, he holds, the county might be compelled to buy back the pavement it placed on the land. "However," Attorney Wielgorecki said, "we might consider an offer of $50,000."

For more than two years, the attorney said, he has tried to arrive at a friendly settlement with county officials. "All they did," he declared, "was to push us around. One commissioner told us to go ahead and do our worst, and he said he was speaking for the entire board. All efforts having failed, we went into court and on Oct. 29 Circuit Judge Prystalski gave us a writ of assistance."

Sons Take Turn on Guard.

Yesterday Deputy Sheriff Edwin Nelson and Fred Heintz, armed with the writ, formally turned the section of road over to Ipena's attorney. No Trespassing signs carrying a facsimile of Sheriff Toman's signature were placed on the barricades. Ipena's sons, Albert, William, Edward, and Benjamin, armed with shotguns, prepared to stand a 24 hour watch against trespassers. They were under instructions not to stop any motorist who paid a 10 cent toll.

Traffic over the Southwest highway was forced to detour over a state road and 95th street to avoid the barricade. Hundreds of drivers yesterday, unaware of the dispute, were compelled to retrace their courses.

COUNTY RELIEF FOR INDIGENT VETERANS ASKED

Representatives of the veterans relief commission appeared yesterday before the county board's public service committee headed by Commissioner Peter M. Kelly and asked that the county commissioners in their 1935 budget appropriate $9,000,000 for the care during the present year of 14,500 indigent and unemployed veterans whose families are now supported by the Illinois Emergency relief commission.

Attorney Charles V. Falkenberg, spokesman for the veterans, contended that under the Bogardus law, passed in 1907, the county was to assume the care of indigent war veterans and that such relief was to be administered by the veterans. He asked that the board appropriate funds to employ 450 veterans as case workers, since the veterans are dissatisfied with the present treatment by the IERC case workers.

REPUBLICANS HIT HUGE PAY ROLL OF RELIEF BODY

House Passes Bill to Supply 9 Millions.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 11.—[Special.]—Gov. Henry Horner's measure appropriating 9 million dollars from surplus sales tax funds for relief purposes and the Chicago board of education "pegged" levy bill were passed today by the house and then placed on second reading in a perfunctory session of the senate.

In the senate the two measures are to be advanced to third reading in another perfunctory session on Monday and will be called for passage Tuesday. Both bills carry emergency clauses and will become effective immediately upon signature by the governor.

The "pegged" levy bill received 133 aye and 1 nay votes, the dissenting vote being cast by John A. Bingham [Rep., Galena]. For the relief measure there was recorded 145 votes and, while there were no dissenting votes, several Republicans declared on roll call that this was the last time they would vote for a relief appropriation until there had been an investigation of the administration of relief in the state.

Million for Pay Roll.

"The sad part of this appropriation of 9 millions," said Representative Richard J. Lyons [Rep., Libertyville], "is that about one million will go to the relief commission's 9,500 pay rollers. These pay rollers receive from $75 a month to $8,000 a year, while those on relief are being pushed around and insulted.

"We are losing control of relief in Illinois to the social workers. There should be an investigation and relief administration should be returned to the county boards and county supervisors, who would get rid of the excessive pay rollers."

Representative Lottie Holman O'Neill [Rep., Downers Grove] said the joint legislative relief investigating committee appointed by a previous general assembly should make its report. She said she was voting for the appropriation under protest, as the relief commission is flouting the legislature.

"The commission sent us one of those college educated social workers," said Representative Clinton Searle [Rep., Rock Island]. "This little squirt, this little brain truster, tells the residents of Rock Island county on relief what they can eat. All he has done has been to increase the cost."

Precedent Is Followed.

Representative Leroy M. Green [Rep., Rockford], the minority leader, said that the bill is in line with previous measures submitted by the Republicans to use sales tax money for relief. Representative Maurice O. Kalahar [Rep., Bloomington] declared that the money would go further if there was a check on waste, and that he wouldn't vote for any more relief appropriations until there had been an investigation.

The only answer from the Democratic side of the house came from Representative Frank Holten [Dem., East St. Louis]. He asked: "Aren't these relief workers Republican holdovers?"

The board of education bill, which was submitted by Representative John R. McSweeney [Dem., Chicago], pegs the educational fund levy for 1935 at $43,000,000, similar to the one for 1934, and the building fund levy at $4,000,000. Passage of the measure will enable the board to complete its budget.

After passage of the bills, an employé from the state auditor's office arrived with the members' salary checks. There was an expression of glee upon his approach, and the representatives hastened to relieve him of the money.

Bank Bill Offered.

A bill permitting public officials, who are custodians of public funds in closed banks, to participate in the reorganization of the banks was submitted by Representative Henry Knauf [Dem., Ladd]. Two drivers' license bills were submitted by Representatives Charles H. Weber and Edward P. O'Grady, both Democratic members from Chicago. The two bills are similar to the one introduced by O'Grady in a previous assembly, neither one being a draft of the bill that is to be sponsored by the Keep Chicago Safe committee and many other organizations in the state.

Both the senate and the house adjourned until Monday. The house will have nothing to do, but is required to be in session at the same time the senate is. Both sessions will be perfunctory ones, the senate meeting only to advance the relief and Chicago board of education bills.

LABOR REPORTS JOBLESS RANKS INCREASE IN '34

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 11.—[Special.]—Labor reviewed the year 1934 today and found no significant gains were made in employment, wages or hours of work under the New Deal recovery program. For the year 1935 the American Federation of Labor sees no prospect of private business raising production quickly back to normal.

Such gains as were made under the National Recovery act were made in 1933, the federation reported. During 1934 production of mines and factories increased only slightly; production on farms decreased, and nothing was provided to raise living standards, according to the review, although industrial profits rose, business failures decreased, and the business community was in a better position to carry on profitable activity at the end of the year than at the beginning.

The report finds unemployment increased during the year. Small gains made in manufacturing, mining, utilities, trade and service industries were offset by losses in other industries. The federation estimates that 400,000 more persons were added to the ranks of the unemployed during the year.

COLLAPSES AT CHURCH; DIES.

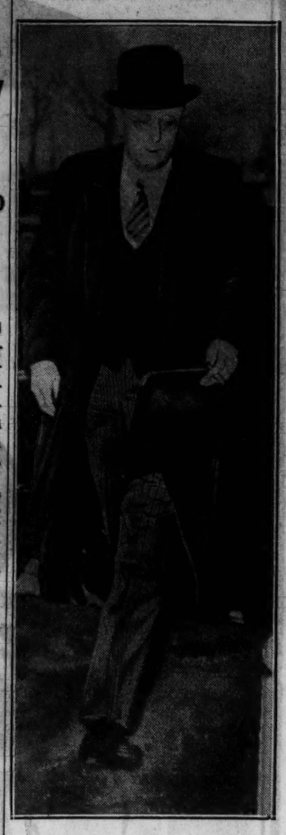
IN COLD BATTLE



Attorney General Cummings entering Supreme court in Washington to argue for government in important gold cases.

GOLD PAYMENT DECISION UP TO SUPREME COURT

Final Appeal Based on U. S. Welfare.

character and so long as the bondholder received dollars the government's obligation was fulfilled, he argued.

Justice Stone then took up the theory that a government cannot even bind itself in such a way as to limit its future sovereignty.

"What about the constitutional power to borrow money against the credit of the United States?" he asked. Mr. MacLean acknowledged that power and the justice continued:

"In such a way as to create an obligation?"

"An obligation to pay in dollars," MacLean said.

"The bond doesn't say so," said Justice Stone.

MacLean then insisted that there was no taking of property without due process of law, no condemnation in such a sense as to warrant just compensation, nothing but a conversion of one form of currency to another without affecting the market value "one iota."

New Deal Decision.

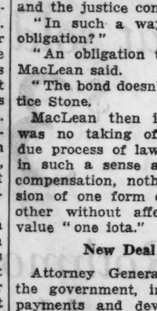
Attorney General Cummings said the government, in suspending gold payments and devaluing the dollar, was dealing with a situation that America never had faced before "and dealing with it under circumstances that appalled men of stout heart."

"The problem was so closely intermingled not only with the lives and domestic affairs of our people, but with international relations that the burden of deciding what to do was tremendous," he said.

"It was approached with the highest conception of public duty. All these considerations advanced here by special interests and particular groups were considered. Our course was embarked upon only as a matter of supreme necessity. The right to provide for the people a sound and consistent currency is a very great power. It was used primarily for the general welfare of the American people and to stop the terrible consequences of deflation."

The justices of the Supreme court now are ready to begin work on one of the most important opinions in the history of that tribunal, certainly the most important in the economic sense since the legal tender cases following the civil war. If the government loses this case the 2 billion 200 million dollar "gold profit" stabilization fund will be lost and the national debt will be increased by 17 billion dollars. Total gold clause obligations will be increased from 100 to 169 billion dollars.

HORNER NAMES J. E. RAGEN TO PRISONS PLACE



JOSEPH E. RAGEN.

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 11.—[Special.]—Gov. Horner today announced the appointment of Joseph E. Ragen of Carlisle as acting superintendent of prisons.

Mr. Ragen has been warden of the Menard branch of the Illinois state penitentiary for two years and will remain warden of the institution in charge of its affairs without change in policies or personnel. He expects to be able to give at least a third of his time to the other penal institutions of the state. He succeeds Col. Frank D. Whipp, who has been acting in the dual capacity of superintendent of prisons and as warden of the Joliet penitentiaries. Whipp will remain at the Joliet institutions as warden.

Ragen was born in Clinton county, enlisted in the navy during the world war, was deputy sheriff and sheriff of Clinton county for four years and county treasurer two years. He is married and the father of two children.

770 MILLION BILL PASSES IN HOUSE AFTER ATTACKS

Trade Pacts Are Assailed by Protectionists.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 11.—[Special.]—Without a recorded vote the house today passed the independent offices bill containing appropriations of 770 million dollars. The funds were voted to finance the executive office and numerous bureaus, boards and commissions for the fiscal year 1936.

The total was an increase of 160 millions over the appropriations for 1935 because of the adding of pay rollers as a result of New Deal legislation, additions in the veterans' administration and the 100 per cent restoration of salaries after July 1, 1935.

At the outset of the afternoon's debate Representative Clarence J. McLeod [Rep., Mich.] introduced an amendment calling for the pay restoration up to July 1 at a cost of 30 million dollars. The measure was ruled out of order on the motion of Clifton A. Woodrum [Dem., Va.], who was guiding the progress of the bill.

Potato Protest Made.

Protectionists in the house then began an attack on an outlay of $426,753 for work on reciprocal trade agreements. Maine's Republican congressman, Ralph O. Brewster, former governor of the state, proposed that the appropriation be erased in its entirety.

"The Cuban trade treaty, recently negotiated, with one of the items bearing down on potatoes, is like kicking a man when he's down," asserted Brewster. "I come from potato country and potatoes are selling for 4 cents a peck. It would estimate the annual loss at 100 million dollars for the 18 states growing potatoes."

Brewster referred to the Supreme court decision against untoward delegation of congressional powers to the President and demanded a tarif commission free from executive interference.

Sees Menace to Cement.

The same thing was happening to the tomato market, Representative Edith Nourse Rogers [Rep., Mass.] declared, and her state grew a lot of tomatoes. Representative Everett M. Dirksen [Rep., Ill.] pointed out that trade treaties were practically completed with Switzerland and Belgium that would endanger the cement industry.

The other amendments failed as the Democratic steam roller forged ahead. The proposals were to raise the adjusted service certificates fund appropriation by 40 million dollars, sponsored by Representative Daniel A. Reed [Rep., N. Y.], and the elimination of $264,000 for the federal home bank board, introduced by Representative Thomas L. Blanton [Dem., Tex.].

Woodrum accused Blanton of opposing the bank board because he couldn't obtain the appointment of appraisers and had lost out on a loan.

A resolution asking for a congressional investigation of the Home Owners' Loan corporation was introduced by Representative Martin L. Sweeney [Dem., O.]. Minority Leader Bertrand Snall [Rep., N. Y.] said he was willing to take a vote on the proposition, but Sweeney chose to refer the matter to the rules committee.

Reports on Holding Companies.

Representative Sam Rayburn [Dem., Tex.] made a committee report on an investigation into holding companies and announced that he would introduce legislation designed to prevent the recurrence of debacles such as the Insull collapse.

Bonus talk was heard everywhere on Capitol hill this afternoon. The Illinois Republicans in the house held a conference in the afternoon and decided with one exception, to go on record for immediate payment of the bonus.

The Illinoisans who announced their intention to vote for the bonus were Dirksen, John Buckbee, Chauncey W. Reed, Leo E. Allen, and Leslie C. Arends. The sixth member of the Republican delegation, Ralph Church, said he had not arrived at a decision.

The house adjourned till Monday.

Business Is Better—Sir George Marks.

Grave fears for the continued economic and political stability of the United States, unless governmental spending is halted or taxes sharply increased, were expressed yesterday by Sir George Croydon Marks, baron of Woolwich, Labor party leader in the British house of lords.

A member of the house of commons for nineteen years until his elevation to the peerage in 1929, Lord Marks is senior partner in the international firm of Marks & Clerk, consulting engineers. He is stopping at the Bismarck hotel while on his annual visit to the Chicago office of his firm.

Finds Business Has Improved.

"The reports that reached me in New York," Lord Marks said, "indicate a decided improvement over those received on my last American visit six months ago. They reflect, to a somewhat lesser extent, the general improvement seen in England and Canada."

But whether this improvement resulted "because of or despite your New Deal," the English engineer was unable to state.

"If I were in politics in your country, I would not know if I should praise or condemn your President," Lord Marks continued. "His motives cannot be questioned, but there must be some end to this extravagant spending on non-productive public works.

Warns Debt Must be Paid.

"The American people are saddled with a vast public debt and they might just as well make up their minds now that they must pay. Your taxes must be increased many times if this spending is to continue."

"Taxes are not to be feared," Lord Marks said. "They are not pleasant and even in England we kick about them. But only through heavy taxes has England been able to avoid bolshevism and socialism. A good many of our wealthy families have discovered that they can only live in one house at a time."

EX-CONVICT GETS THIRTY YEARS IN PRISON FOR RAPE

Howard Crainich, 34 years old, 6330 Ingleside avenue, was sentenced to 30 years in the penitentiary yesterday by Judge Walter P. Steffen after pleading guilty to the rape of a 16 year old school girl.

Crainich, who stole the girl's pocketbook containing $1, also was sentenced to one to 20 years on a charge of robbery, the sentences to run concurrently. On Dec. 18 Crainich seized his victim and dragged her into an alley at the side of St. Theodore's church, 6205 South Paulina street.

Crainich had served time in the Oklahoma penitentiary and another term of one year in the house of correction here for larceny.

DENY NEW DEAL PERILS SECURITY OF POWER FIRMS

Commission Replies to Utilities' Charges.

BY STANLEY ARMSTRONG.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 11.—[Special.]—The administration's attack on the public utilities will continue unrelentingly. This was disclosed by President Roosevelt this morning in the presentation of the federal power commission's answer to the charge that the New Deal policy was threatening the security of widows, orphans and investors.

The President branded the reports of the danger to widows, orphans, life insurance policy holders and saving depositors as an effort made by certain utility groups to scare everybody to death. On the "hunch" that securities of operating companies had held up better than other classes of bonds, he said he ordered the commission to investigate reports.

Findings Prove "Hunch."

The findings of the power commission substantiate the "hunch," the President said, adding that they needed no further amplification from him. The findings also were seen as strengthening the President's program to correct "the evils of holding companies" as expressed in his annual message.

The President said he did not know when his recommendations regarding holding com anies would be sent to congress. He was not sure whether the suggestions will be in the form of a bill or as to the form of administratorship over holding companies. He said a lot of people are working on the question and he may not be prepared to act for two or three weeks.

In its findings the power commission said the charge that the government's yardstick is imperiling widows and orphans was a false issue drawn into the fight of private interests against extension of the government's drive for lower electrical rates.

Investments Are Safe.

"The utility investments of standard life insurance companies and savings banks are and always have been almost exclusively in bonds of operating companies," the commission said. "They hold few preferred stocks and almost no holding company securities of any kind."

The commission said present prices of 121 of the 164 public utility bonds listed as legal for investments of insurance companies and savings banks in New York is 6.6 points higher than they were before the market crash of 1929. The market value of the bonds is 109 million dollars higher than they were in September of 1929, according to the commission.

HITLER EXTENDS WELCOMING HAND TO FOES IN SAAR

Promises Not to Punish Anti-Hitlerites.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Jan. 11.—Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler tonight indorsed promises made recently by Joseph Buerckel, Nazi commissar for the Saar. He assured all Germans in the territory they would be welcomed back to the fatherland regardless of their political views. On top of that the dictator pledged that there would be no concentration camp for Nazi opponents.

In the same decree Hitler appointed Buerckel as "commissar for reincorporation of the Saar" and Nazi district leader for the combined provinces of the Palatinate and the Saar.

Plan Loan to Saar.

Germany's public insurance companies, which include illness insurance, old age insurance, and unemployment insurance, will grant a loan of $1,250,000 to the Saar district for ten years. This credit is to replace the French loan to German firms which will be canceled upon the return of the Saar to Germany.

A romantic touch will be lent Sunday's plebiscite celebrations in the reich by the association of Germany's 3,000,000 war veterans, the Kyffhaeuserbund. The national shrine of the Kyffhaeuser association is a mountain in Harz, where, according to old tales, Emperor Frederick Barbarossa is sleeping in a cave, with his red beard growing through the roots of the trees, awaiting the fatherland's return to the greatness it witnessed in his days. The entire mountainside will be flooded with light as a "symbol of fidelity and to express the sympathy of 3,000,000 former soldiers for their brothers and sisters in the Saar."

Cheer Departing Voters.

Berlin's main railroad station tonight was the scene of much singing, marching, and cheering as Saarlanders of Berlin and East Prussia boarded four special trains to the Saar to vote for the return of the land of their birth to Germany. Other trains left Leipzig, Halle, Bremen, Madgeburg, and Hamburg.

Reichsbishop Ludwig Mueller has ordered bells on all Protestant churches in Germany to peal for an hour between 6 and 7 o'clock tomorrow evening in honor of the plebiscite.

NEW DRAMA IN SAAR

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SAARBRUECKEN, Saar Basin Territory, Jan. 11.—With the plebiscite which is supposed to decide the fate of the Saar coming up Sunday, there is a growing campaign to disregard the actual vote, if it is at all close, and maintain the present league of nations régime until some future plebiscite.

This is the real drama of the Saar conflict for it is hard to imagine any outcome which is more calculated to turn Europe upside down. The possibility of throwing out the vote and holding a second plebiscite in another five or ten years frequently has been mentioned, but in these closing days of the campaign, it begins to appear for the first time as a real danger.

The anti-Nazis are now pinning their last hope on this possibility inasmuch as the basin is expected to vote to return to Germany.

No Legal Obstacle.

As far as the treaty of Versailles is concerned there is no legal obstacle to such a decision. The treaty specifies that the league council shall decide whether to keep the territory under its wing, award it to France or return it to Germany following the wishes of the population as expressed in the plebiscite and taking into consideration all factors bearing on the problem.

Consequently the anti-Nazis say that if they roll up 40 or even 35 per cent of the votes, it is fair to assume that they would have had a majority except for Nazi terrorism and underhand tactics. If the league believes this to be the case, the council has full authority to disregard the Nazis' official majority.

Hot Heads Favor Splitting Basin.

Another more sinister alternative, which some hot heads among the left wing elements here favor and which the French press talks about with great complacency, is to split up the territory. The council also has authority to do this since the treaty specifies that it may dispose of the whole territory or part of it, according to the results of the vote. In theory any one of the 860 precincts which returns an anti-Hitler majority might be detached from the rest of the territory.

However, political experts are dubious that any kind of reasonable partition of the territory could be carried out if based purely on an official vote.

Isolated disorders were reported in the Saar today.

Man Shot in Village.

A man was shot in the stomach in the village of Huningen. It was learned that agents of the German front have been visiting local Jews demanding that they turn over their voters' cards because they do not expect Jews to vote in favor of Hitler's régime. If they promise not to vote against Hitler they are guaranteed immunity when the Germans take over the Saar. To insure that the Jews do not vote against returning to Germany, the Nazis are forcing the Jews to surrender their voting cards without which they cannot vote.

Apparently inspired by protests from the anti-Nazi Front, authorities today sent out large forces of police to prevent any demonstrations on the arrival of the main body of 48,000 voters from Germany.

Find Body of Nazi Pastor, Ally of Mueller, in Well

MOENCHSROTH, Germany, Jan. 11.—(AP)—The body of the Rev. Karl Brunnacker, local Bavarian Evangelical pastor and an adherent of Reichsbishop Ludwig Mueller, was found today in a well. He had drowned. It was said the pastor, whose flock was solidly opposed to Mueller, had been in despair because of the long church conflict.

Recalled in Crisis

BRUSSELS, Jan. 11.—(AP)—The youthful King Leopold returned home precipitately today from his winter sports in Switzerland to face difficulties encountered by the government of Premier George Theunis. Dr. Frank Van Cauwelaert, minister of public works, and one of the three Christian Democratic members of the cabinet, resigned.

Political observers said the cabinet would be doomed if Van Cauwelaert were followed out of the government by the remaining Christian Democrats, Philippe van Isacker, minister of economics, and Edouard Rubbens, minister of labor. It was added that their resignations might result in one of the most severe government crises experienced in Belgium in 40 years.

Premier Theunis and Emile Franqui, minister without portfolio, have followed a policy of deflation and salary cuts in efforts to reduce the cost of living and production costs but this program has met wide opposition, both by Socialists and Christian Democrats. Wage earners and unemployed plan a protest parade for Jan. 20.

MAYOR RECEIVES BUST OF HIMSELF MADE BY CHINESE

A lacker and silk bust of Mayor Kelly, made by orphan children in the Fukien Children's home, Foochow, China, was presented to the mayor yesterday by H. F. Tung, chairman of the board of directors of the home. The bust, made from a photograph of the mayor, is the first of its kind to be imported to America, said Robert T. K. Kah, Chinese consul general in Chicago, who attended the presentation.

OLDEST RESIDENT DIES.

SIX DROWN AS FLOOD SWEEPS CONNECTICUT

New Haven, Conn., Jan. 11.—(AP)—With the Connecticut river at Hartford still above flood stage, the state tonight counted four dead. Two more were dead in Vermont.

Hundreds of occupants of homes, normally some distance from the Connecticut river, were forced either to leave or to be prepared to quit them on a moment's notice.

Five persons stepped off a bridge in Danielson at the start of the high water in the Quinebaug river, just in time. Within a few minutes, the structure had been swept downstream amid a crush of ice and swirling water.

2 Die in Nova Scotia.

HALIFAX, N. S., Jan. 11.—(AP)—Swollen Nova Scotia streams, backed up by ice jams, caused at least two deaths today, flooded the countryside and caused property damage unofficially estimated at $500,000.

Leo Melanson, 55, attempting to cross the Sissiboo river, fell through the ice blockade and drowned. Joan Irving, 2, was swept away by receding flood waters of the Salmon river near Truro.

Several families were marooned in homes surrounded by water. Thrilling rescues were reported.

Girl, 5, Bitten to Death by Ants as She Sleeps

SANTIAGO, Cuba, Jan. 11.—(AP)—Margarita Rondon, 5, died here today after three days of medical effort to save her life from the effects of fire-ant bites. Her parents had wrapped the child up and put her to sleep before leaving their home to attend a dance. On their return they found her unconscious and covered with fire-ants, which had poisoned her blood with their bites and had devoured sections of her flesh.

KING OF SWEDEN ANNOUNCES END OF DEPRESSION

Budget Is Balanced and Dole Is Slashed.

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Jan. 11.—(AP)—Sweden celebrated the apparent end of its depression today as parliament, opening its regular session, commemorated the 500th anniversary of its founding.

In his annual message King Gustav told the lawmakers that solution of the problem of unemployment appears to be near.

The government has been able to balance the budget, he reported, without imposing new taxes or floating large public loans. The national debt will be reduced this year 40,000,000 kroner [about $10,000,000], he said.

Dole Appropriation Cut.

Testifying to the fact that Socialist Sweden, by dint of foresight and long range planning, has beaten the depression was the government's request for only 60,000,000 kroner [about $15,000,000] for unemployment relief. This compared with 160,000,000 [about $40,000,000] appropriated last year, and 180,000,000 [about $45,000,000] two years ago. Half of last year's appropriations remained unspent. The number of unemployed has dwindled to 80,000, just over one per cent of Sweden's entire population.

The story of public relief in Sweden—a story several American New Dealers deemed worthy of close study—was unique in that the government appropriated much more money than was actually needed.

A definite upward economic surge now has made the nation almost completely stranger to huddled bread lines, soup kitchens, and men with turned-up collars and the look of hunger on their faces. At the worst of it, even, none went hungry, it is asserted.

Prepared for Slump in 1914.

Paradoxically, Sweden has devoted more time and attention to problems of public relief than most other countries, and the visiting American government officials have expressed the opinion that Sweden's social welfare program is in many ways the ultimate goal of the New Deal.

Preparedness had much to do with the freedom from suffering when the depression struck. As far back as 1914 Sweden appointed a committee to investigate unemployment and map out a program for unemployment relief. In the resulting program several definite principles were evolved, one of them the clear distinction between "unemployed" relief and "poor" relief in order to avoid any social stigma on the man who received work through the appropriated funds.

"This distinction," said an American expert in Sweden recently to study relief methods, "must be made clearer in the United States for the sake of public morale."

BOLLES IS NAMED FOR THE RANK OF MAJOR GENERAL

Brig. Gen. Frank C. Bolles, commandant of Fort Sheridan and acting head of the Sixth Army Corps area, received official notification from Washington yesterday that his nomination for the rank of major general had been forwarded by President Roosevelt to the senate.

At the same time it was reported that after Feb. 1, when Maj. Gen. Frank R. McCoy arrives to take charge of the sixth corps area, Gen. Bolles will be transferred from Fort Sheridan. The general, however, refused to comment on this, stating that he had no official information.

BRUNO NAMED WRITER OF ALL RANSOM NOTES

Expert Identifies Script as Hauptmann's.

"That they were not the writers of the ransom notes."

Q.—Have you made a careful comparison of the ransom notes with specimens of the handwriting of Bruno Richard Hauptmann? A—I have.

Q.—Was there sufficient material given you to form a conclusion? A.—There was a volume sufficient to form a positive opinion.

Q.—Have you reached a conclusion based upon this comparison? A—I have.

Reilly objected to the word "conclusion" and the word "opinion" was substituted.

"What is the opinion?" the witness was asked.

CALLS HAUPTMANN WRITER

"My opinion is," announced Osborn in his loud voice, "that the ransom notes all were written by the writer of the various papers signed Richard Hauptmann."

Q.—The ransom notes all were written by the same writer? A.—They were.

Osborn was shown the notes and identified them.

"Please explain the reason which made you come to the conclusion you have just announced," ordered Prosecutor Lanigan.

Osborn faced the jury. He held in his hands large photographic reproductions of the ransom letters and talked in the manner of a man delivering a lecture.

"My first examination," he said, "was to determine whether the same writer wrote all fourteen notes. I decided this in several ways.

"The letters are connected by the language in them, by the use of words, by the peculiar spelling, but mainly and most positively by the peculiar and ingenious device that appeared in the lower right hand corner of each one."

Describes Ransom Symbol.

Osborn described this symbol in detail. It consisted, he pointed out to the jury, of two overlapping circles made with ordinary red writing ink and the puncturing of three holes in the paper with some sharp instrument.

"I think the circles probably were made by dipping a small bottle in ink and then pressing it on the paper," he said. "Whatever was used did not take ink well, and as a result the impressions were not perfect."

The three holes in the paper were "most significant" in determining the authorship of the notes as that of one man, he said.

"They all are punched from the same model or pattern and all are in the same position on the paper," he said.

Then he began to go into the spelling used in the letters, pointing out similarities. One of these was that an extra "N" was inserted before the "G" in words like "signature" and "ignore," he pointed out, making them read "singnature" and "ingnore." Another was the spelling of the word "not" as "note."

Three Connecting Links.

"Fortunately, in this case," he said, "there was a large amount of writing to make the comparisons. It would have been difficult otherwise to compare the two handwritings. As it is, they are obviously connected in three ways, in general, in ordinary, and in unusual or rare characteristics.

"This matter of handwriting comparison is a matter of reasoning. Handwriting is identified as a man, or an automobile, or a horse is identified —by the characteristics evident.

"In my opinion, the writer of the ransom notes used a disguised hand. Hauptmann has two methods of writing, his natural hand as shown on the automobile applications and in part of his voluntary writing for the police, and his disguised hand, which was used in writing the kidnap notes and also in part of his voluntary writing."

"Hauptmann Fell Into Trap."

Hauptmann, it has been brought out in evidence, was eager to write at the dictation of the police, declaring that he would thus be shown to be innocent.

But, according to Osborn, he had used the disguised hand so often that he could not refrain from using it in his voluntary writing and thus fell into a trap which he was trying to avoid.

"In these specimens of his handwriting obtained by the police there are two different styles used," Osborn told the jury. "Sometimes it was that of the ordinary hand and sometimes that of the ransom notes."

UNDOTTED "I" IS CLEW

On such small matters as habitual failure to cross his t's and dot his i's may Hauptmann's guilt or innocence be determined, the witness disclosed.

"I counted 391 t's in the ransom notes, and only three were crossed," Osborn said. "There were about the same number of t's in the voluntary writing and the same failure to cross them. There were 304 small i's in the ransom notes, and only seven were dotted. The same proportion exists in the voluntary writing."

Among other peculiarities of Hauptmann's handwriting which caused the expert to identify him as the writer of the ransom notes were the following:

A peculiar "x" which looked like a double "e"; the word "the" written as "hte"; the word "yeahs" for "years"; an unusual final "t which was merely a single upward stroke; a peculiar final "r"; a backward "n"; a capital "I" which looked something like a "J"; a distorted and almost illegible "s" and an "o" which was open at the top.

Hauptmann invariably wrote "New York" with a hyphen connecting the two words, both in the ransom notes and in his ordinary writing, Osborn testified.

Osborn, a rosy cheeked and smiling man of 60, is expected to testify many hours more. He has appeared in many famous trials and was an experienced witness, who sometimes reminded the attorneys that they had neglected little legal technicalities. His attitude was that of a lecturer in a classroom and he tried to make his lecture clear and intelligible to the jurors.

Wilson, the revenue agent, said the first ransom bill which turned up after payment of the $50,000 was a $20 gold certificate which was passed at 72d street and Broadway, New York City, in the vicinity of the Majestic apartment building, upon which Hauptmann had worked as a carpenter.

All the other ransom bills were passed in or near New York, the witness said. He denied, under cross-examination, that the currency had been passed in other states or abroad.

$31,000 Still Missing.

He admitted that $31,000 of the $50,000 still was unaccounted for. Because of the great flood of gold certificates which poured into the national treasury at the time of President Roosevelt's gold embargo, he testified, it was impossible to check the serial numbers and much of the ransom money now may be in the United States treasury vaults.

SESSION OPENS QUIETLY

There was a perceptible lessening of the tension at the trial as the morning session opened. There were in prospect no more witnesses of the Dr. Condon or Betty Gow type. Instead, the program for the state was the somewhat monotonous but all-important task of proving the serial numbers on the ransom currency and the identification of Hauptmann's handwriting.

The first witness was Frank Wilson, who proclaimed himself special agent in charge of the intelligence unit of the internal revenue department at Washington.

"I was assigned to investigation of the Lindbergh case in March, 1932," Wilson said in answer to questions put to him by Attorney General David T. Wilentz, chief of the prosecution staf. "Two other federal agents and myself went to Hopewell, N. J., and conferred with Col. Lindbergh and the state police."

"State Police Coöperated."

"Did you have full coöperation from the state police?"

"We had full coöperation at all times," was the answer.

[The defense contends the New Jersey state police monopolized the investigation and refused to coöperate with other authorities.]

Wilson directed the notation of the serial numbers on the gold certificates which made up the ransom money, he said. The work was done by clerks in the office of J. P. Morgan & Co., he testified.

A large book the size of a telephone directory was produced. This contained the serial numbers, the witness said. Two hundred and fifty thousand copies of the numbers were broadcast to the world, he told the jury.

A large envelope containing the $14,600 found in Hauptmann's possession then was produced. The somewhat apathetic jury brightened. The sight of the stacks of currency made their eyes glisten.

Wilson said there were 493 twenty-dollar bills and 474 ten-dollar bills in the envelope. The envelope was offered as the state's hundredth exhibit.

Knew Ransom Was to be Paid.

"Now, your business is the catching of criminals," Wilentz said.

"Yes," replied Wilson.

Q.—You knew that the ransom money was to be paid? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you make any effort to apprehend the man to whom the ransom was paid? A.—No.

Q.—Wasn't it your duty to seek to capture this man? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you perform that duty? A.—Yes.

Q.—How? A.—We retained the serial numbers of the ransom money and as a result were successful in finding a large amount of money in the possession of a certain person who has been indicted and now is on trial for murder.

Q.—Who is the man you are talking about? A.—Bruno Richard Hauptmann.

Q.—And since the indictment, has a single ransom bill turned up? A.—Not one.

Ransom Bills Turn Up.

"You mean so far as you know," barked Defense Lawyer C. Lloyd Fisher, taking up cross-examination of the witness.

Fisher attempted to make Wilson admit that, at the time of the trial of John Hughes Curtis for obstructing justice in the Lindbergh case, he had believed Curtis to be in touch with the kidnaping gang. But the state objected and the court sustained the objection.

The first ransom bill, a $20 gold certificate, turned up April 7, 1932, in the vicinity of 72d street and Broadway, New York City, Wilson said. He added, to the discomfiture of the defense lawyer, that the Majestic apartments were at that address.

The state later brought out that Hauptmann had worked as a carpenter on the apartments.

The second bill, a $5 note, turned up in a bank on lower Broadway, Wilson said.

The defense lawyer tried to get the witness to say that ransom bills had been found all over the country and even abroad, but Wilson declared they all had been passed in or near New York City. Fisher continued:

Q.—Did you hear of a $20 bill being picked up in Bridgeport, Conn.? A.—No, none ever was found in Connecticut.

Q.—Wasn't some found abroad? A.—Not that I know of.

Q.—Hear of a $20 bill being found in London? A.—No.

To succeeding questions Wilson denied that ransom bills had been found in Philadelphia, Chicago, or Washington, D. C.

Q.—Ever hear about $3,000 of ransom money being deposited by Max Schlaug, a florist? A.—No.

Q.—Wasn't $2,980 of ransom money deposited in a New York bank the last day before the gold embargo went into effect? A.—Yes.

Wilson said investigators never had been able definitly to connect a deposit slip made out in the name of J. J. Faulkner with the person who deposited the $2,980. The writing on the deposit slip was not Hauptmann's, he testified.

Suicide Enters Jase.

"Isn't it true that a J. J. Faulkner committed suicide by jumping from the top of the Chrysler building in New York a few days after the arrest of Hauptmann?" asked Fisher.

Wilson said it was not true. It was recalled that a man named Faulkner had committed suicide at the time, but his initials were not "J. J."

Fisher asked the state to produce the deposit slip and Prosecutor Wilentz promised to do so.

"Now you have told us about $14,600 found in Hauptmann's possession," continued the defense lawyer. "There also was this $2,980 deposited in the bank. How much more ransom money has turned up?"

"Approximately $1,000," said Wilson. "I remember one batch of fifty $10 bills being sent in by the Chase Bank and Trust company."

$31,000 Still Unaccounted.

"Well, that amounts to about $18,800," remarked the lawyer. Courtroom mathematicians observed that his arithmetic was a little faulty. "That leaves $31,000, roughly, that never has been accounted for of the $50,000?"

Wilson admitted this was correct.

On redirect examination Wilson pointed out that some of the ransom gold certificates might be in the treasury at Washington without the knowledge of the government.

"At the time of President Roosevelt's order calling in all gold certificates and gold," he explained, "such a vast amount of money was turned in that it would be practically impossible to check the serial numbers."

Fisher seemed to think this was a disgraceful condition of affairs. He became so severe with the witness about what he termed "laxity" in the treasury department that Prosecutor Wilentz objected to the "harangue."

U. S. REVENUE CHIEF HERE REPORTED ON WAY TO LINDY TRIAL

A. P. Madden, chief of the local intelligence unit of the internal revenue department, may appear as a witness in the kidnaping trial of Richard Bruno Hauptmann at Flemington, N. J., it was reported yesterday when Madden left for Washington.

It was understood that Madden would confer at the capital with his chief, Elmer L. Irey. These two were among the first to number the Lindbergh ransom money, and it was expected that both would be called at the trial to testify concerning identification of the bills.

POLICE UPSET STORY LINKING VIOLET SHARPE

Yonkers, N. Y., Jan. 11.—[Special.]—Capt. John Lamb of the New Jersey state police informed Yonkers police today his men have a complete record of the whereabouts of the late Violet Sharpe, maid in the Englewood home of Mrs. Dwight Morrow, on the night of March 1, 1932, when Charles A. Lindbergh Jr. was kidnaped. They said she was nowhere near Yonkers, discrediting a story told Yonkers police by a woman who said she had seen Miss Sharpe waiting for two hours in a lunchroom near the Yonkers ferry slip.

Accused Rapist Hangs Self in Jail Cell at Hammond

Arthur Poe, 45 years old, of Hammond, hanged himself yesterday in his cell at the city jail in Hammond, where he was held awaiting trial for raping three 11 year old girls of that city. Poe fashioned a noose from a short piece of wire and looped it over the cell bars.

DEFENSE TO GET RANSOM NOTES TODAY FOR STUDY

Handwriting Experts to Examine Letters.

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 11.—[Special.]—Edward J. Reilly, chief of the defense counsel for Bruno Richard Hauptmann, and the handwriting experts for the defense will meet in Trenton tomorrow to examine the originals of the ransom notes.

Reilly said tonight the examination would be held in the office of Attorney General David T. Wilentz with Joseph Lanigan, assistant to Wilentz, present. J. N. Trendley of East St. Louis will be one the defense experts.

Plan Line of Attack.

Up to now the defense has been given only photostatic copies of the ransom papers, and until after the originals have been examined Trendley said it would be impossible to indicate what line of attack the defense would take in regard to the testimony today of Albert S. Osborn, the prosecution expert.

It appeared, however, that the defense will seek to suggest that Osborn's age may have impaired his judgment. It also was indicated the defense will seek to match expert for expert.

"About 15 experts have volunteered to help us," Reilly said, "including one who is in the United States navy. We will use about eight."

Defense Cites "Discrepancies."

"The state," he went on, "seems to have some stuff which possibly might connect the defendant with extortion. But Osborn's testimony has many discrepancies."

To Reilly the future looked "like three weeks of hook and eyes. We'll be experting around here from now on."

For the prosecution former Judge George K. Large declared, "we think Osborn made an excellent witness. We think he demonstrated conclusively that Hauptmann wrote all the notes and letters.

"Osborn's statement, with which he opened his testimony, laid the broad foundation on which he based his conclusions. The jury, I noticed, was greatly interested and listened intently all through."

Calls Wilson "Good Witness."

Of Frank J. Wilson, Judge Large said: "Wilson was, as one would expect from his record, a very good witness. He was important and competent."

Judge Large explained that because of Wilson having testified concerning $18,000 of the ransom money, it did not in any way alter the fact that the prosecution still expects to prove that Hauptmann received $49,960 in the time since the kidnaping which he cannot account for.

Osborn will resume the witness stand Monday. Other experts will follow him, including Clark Sellers of San Francisco, Elbridge Stein of New York City, and H. J. Walters of Chicago.

BIRD FLIES INTO JAIL; GOOD OMEN, SAYS HAUPTMANN

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 11.—[Special.]—A starling today flew into the jail where Bruno Richard Hauptmann spends what time he is not in court, and a lot of superstitious Flemington people were set to wondering.

There is an old belief that when a bird flies into a house a death may be expected there. The starling was captured by Warden Harry O. McCrea, taken to a window, and freed. Hauptmann was in court at the time.

Told of the incident, Hauptmann scoffed at the superstition, declaring the bird's visit was a token of good fortune for him.

The extra guard which accompanies Hauptmann from his cell to the courtroom continued today, a deputy sheriff holding each wrist and state police marching before and behind.

ARMY CORPORAL OF HAUPTMANN MAY BE ON BOAT

LEIPZIG, Jan. 11.—(AP)—Belief that Commissioner Staude of the local police, Hanna Fisch, and a corporal who trained Bruno Richard Hauptmann in the Germany army are accompanying Detective Arthur Johnson to New York was expressed here today.

The New York detective sailed for New York Tuesday aboard the Ile de France from Cherbourg. With him were three unidentified persons.

Commissioner Staude assisted Johnson in the investigation into the past of Hauptmann, on trial at Flemington, N. J., for the murder of Charles A. Lindbergh Jr. Johnson studied the history of Isidor Fisch, the man Hauptmann said gave him the money identified as the Lindbergh ransom currency.

Loaded with vegetables and perishable goods, five cars near the center of a Wabash railroad freight train were derailed near 121st street and the Southwest highway in Palos Park yesterday. Two of the cars toppled down a twenty-five foot embankment and buried their noses in the mud below. Railroad officials said that the accident probably was caused by a defective arch bar beneath one of the cars.

Fisch Collected Ransom, Says Hauptmann Attorney

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 11.—[Special.]—The charge that Isidor Fisch, dead friend of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, wrote the Lindbergh ransom notes and collected the money was made tonight by Edward J. Reilly, chief defense counsel. Since his arrest Hauptmann asserted he got the ransom money from Fisch, who died in Germany of tuberculosis.

EXPECT A PAROLE PLEA FOR ARNOLD YOUTH, SLAYER

An effort to win a parole for Bertrand Arnold, 18 years old, who murdered his stepmother's mother, Mrs. Ellen Saxe, 60 years old, on Nov. 18, 1932, probably will be made within the next few weeks, it was learned yesterday. The youth, former Riverside High school student, who was sentenced to one to fourteen years for the slaying after his conviction in the Cook County Criminal court, has served twenty-five months at Pontiac reformatory.

C. B. Arnold, the boy's father, a wealthy Chicago manufacturer, and Attorney Weymouth Kirkland of the law firm of Kirkland, Fleming, Green & Martin, who defended the boy, are expected to appear before the state board of pardons and paroles and ask for his release. Dr. James Whitney Hall, defense alienist at the trial, said that if he were called at the hearing he would express an opinion that the youth has been adequately punished.

Mrs. Saxe was slain by a hammer blow at the Arnold home at 264 Shenstone road, Riverside. Young Arnold said he had struck here in a moment of blind passion when she refused him the use of the family automobile. He then lowered her body into a cistern and fled. Two days later he was captured in Stockton, 130 miles of Chicago. He pleaded guilty and was sentenced on a manslaughter count.

LINDY RANSOM BILL FOUND IN QUAKER STATE

Gettysburg, Pa., Jan. 11.—(AP)—A bill paid in the Lindbergh ransom turned up today in Gettysburg.

When Mervin E. Tipton, who conducts a shoe repair shop, handed Charles W. Myers, his landlord, a $10 bill in part payment of rent, both men noticed the bill was drawn on the Hunterdon County National bank, at Flemington, N. J.

Suspecting that the note might be one used in paying the Lindbergh ransom, both went to a bank, where the serial number was checked. The number, A001005, tallied with the number of one of the ransom notes. Tipton is unable to trace the ransom note. Department of justice officials were notified.

HAUPTMANN CAR REPAINTED SOON AFTER KIDNAPING

Garage Men Tell Work on "Dirty Green" Auto.

New York, Jan. 11.—[Special.]—Bruno Richard Hauptmann had the "dark, dirty green" body of his Dodge sedan painted black in a Bronx garage a month after the Lindbergh kidnaping, owners of the garage revealed today.

Amandus Hochmuth testified Tuesday at the Hauptmann trial in Flemington that about ten hours before the kidnaping a man drove past his house toward the Lindbergh estate in a "dirty green" sedan. He identified that man as Hauptmann.

Wilentz Studies Story.

Attorney General David T. Wilentz, chief of the prosecution staf in the Hauptmann trial, tonight said he is investigating the story.

The painting of Hauptmann's car was brought to light by Larry Snofsky, who, with his partner, Max Frankel, operates the Claremont Parkway garage at 403 Claremont parkway, the Bronx.

Saturday, while thumbing through some old accounts, he discovered Hauptmann's name signed to two bills for the painting and repair work done in April, 1932, when the partners had their garage at 350 East 182d street, the Bronx.

Frankel and Snofsky did not recall Hauptmann's visit, but when they told their mechanic, George Johnson, about the bills, he remembered it.

"Hauptman brought the car in on April 3, 1932 It was a dark, dirty green Dodge sedan. He wanted it painted black," Johnson said.

"Didn't Talk Much."

"I can't remember whether he paid in gold notes. There wasn't any reason for me to suspect anything. He acted just as any other customer, except that he was rather stern and didn't talk much."

Snofsky said the accounts showed that, on April 7, 1932, Hauptmann paid $25 for the work. Two days later he had a spring reset and the tail light repaired and paid $15 for this and other minor repairs.

The partners notified police and Johnson was questioned by police officials Sunday and this week. Today Inspector Henry Bruckman was reported in Flemington conferring with prosecutors about this new piece of evidence. Johnson and the partners say they have not yet been asked to testify.

TWA PLANE FLIES TO NEW YORK IN 3 HRS. 15 MINUTES

The first Transcontinental Western Airlines plane on the new nonstop daily flight from Chicago to New York City yesterday sped over the 725 mile airway in three hours 15 minutes, for an average speed of 223 miles an hour, company officials reported here. The scheduled time for the nonstop trip is four hours, but the plane yesterday was aided by a 30 mile an hour tail wind over most of the route.

Yesterday's flight set no records, but came close to TWA's own record of three hours seven minutes. The fastest recorded flight between New York and Chicago was made by an American Airlines plane in two hours 59 minutes. The TWA plane yesterday carried 12 passengers. Bob Le Roy was pilot and C. F. Robey co-pilot. The new service had been scheduled to open Tuesday, but it was delayed by the fog which settled over the northern portion of the United States last Sunday and halted all air travel until Thursday night.

ATHLETE DIES OF AUTO INJURIES.

Kalamazoo, Mich., Jan. 11.—[Special.]—Robert Cretsinger, 15, high school athlete, died today of injuries received in an automobile accident Tuesday evening.

VAUDEVILLE AGENT TO OFFER CONTRACT TO HAUPTMANN JURY

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 11.—[Special.]—Jurors in the trial of Bruno Richard Hauptmann each will be offered vaudeville contracts of $300 a week to tell their story of the case, it was reported here today.

A vaudeville booking agent is said to be prepared to offer them contracts to tour the country's show circuits as a unit.

Other principals in the case also have received offers of stage and writing contracts.

Dr. John F. Condon, "Jafsie" of the ransom negotiations, has been offered "thousands and thousands of dollars" to tell his story, according to Attorney General David T. Wilentz, chief of the prosecution staf.

Betty Gow, the Lindbergh baby's nurse at the time of the kidnaping, and other persons figuring in the case have received offers, it was said.

A pretty girl brought field glasses with her to the balcony when she came to watch the trial today. First she trained them on Hauptmann, then on Col. Lindbergh and the judge and jury. She shared her glasses with her neighbors.

The state of New Jersey is expected to bear the entire cost of the trial. For that reason, the Hunterdon county board of freeholders has prepared its 1935 budget without provision for any cost of the case. The cost may approach $100,000.

Five women of the dowager type, attired in mink coats, entered court this morning just as the trial opened. Beaming, Edward J. Reilly, chief of the defense counsel, came forward and found seats for them. One of the party viewed the proceedings through a lorgnette.

O. F. B. Holcombe of Overland Park, Kas., was born in the courthouse in which Hauptmann is being tried. That was 77 years ago when Holcombe's father was sherif of Hunterdon county. The living quarters of the sherif's family were in the courthouse.

The trial has resulted in something comparable to an "old home week" for Flemington. The Hunterdon County Democrat commented that some of the old residents "left when they were in their teens and many now are returning to see how old friends are standing up under the glaring spotlight of international publicity."

IDENTIFIES GEM SWINDLER FROM OPERATION SCAR

New York, Jan. 11.—[Special.]—A New York surgeon, who six years ago saved a man's life by an emergency operation, today identified his patient in police headquarters as the same man who, as a convalescent, repaid the doctor's kindness by swindling him and his wife out of $7,400 in a fake diamond sale.

The physician, Dr. J. P. Hoguet, who was decorated by France in 1926 for his service to mankind, and Mrs. Hoguet picked out Eugene Celatano, 41 years old, as the man who had insisted on selling Mrs. Hoguet sixty-five pieces of glass as evidence of his deep appreciation of her husband.

As Dr. Huguet greeted Celatano he said:

"I know you and you know me. I performed an emergency operation upon you which saved your life." Celatano denied this, whereupon Dr. Hoguet described the operation and where the scar was located. Detectives found the doctor's evidence accurate.

TOKIO BARES PLAN FOR AIR LINK WITH PACIFIC ISLANDS

Insists Scheme Has No Military Significance.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TOKIO Jan. 11.—Japan's plan to link its western Pacific mandate islands more closely to the homeland by thousands of miles of air lines got under way today as the league of nations council prepared to decide next week whether Japan is entitled to keep the islands after its secession from the league becomes effective on March 27.

Kenjiro Tamura, chief of the aeronautic bureau and communications department, said all preparations for the air network have now been completed and for the first time gave out definite details of the service. He said Tokio and the island of Pelew will be 28 hours apart by way of Hachijo and the islands of Chichijima, Mogu, Saipan, and Yap. Six 8 passenger seaplanes have already been ordered built.

First Flight in Spring.

The first flight will be made between April and June, Tamura said. He expressed conviction that the diet would pass the budget which has already been introduced.

Planes will fly semi-monthly and will carry mail for the most part, according to Tamura's announcement.

Officials deny that a military air base is being built on any of the mandate islands in conjunction with the service or that the lines are for military purposes.

Meanwhile the army and navy as well as the government stick firmly to their stand that no matter what the league's decision, Japan will retain possession of the islands.

Tamura denied that plans are under way to fly Zeppelins, which Japan is reported about to purchase from Germany, to the south seas.

Plan to Speed Up Air Services.

In conjunction with the opening of the South Seas air service, plans are under way to speed up all air line schedules in the empire, and also to connect Formosa with the mainland so that one will be able to eat breakfast in Tokio and dinner in Taihoku, capital of Formosa.

For this purpose it has been decided to begin work establishing radio beacons and air fields in April. The work is expected to be completed by fall and regular daily service will be inaugurated next January.

The planes will be copies of the twelve passenger Douglas planes which Japan purchased this fall. The route will be from Tokio via Osaka and Fukuoka. The planes will leave Tokio at 9 a. m. and arrive at Formosa at 5 p. m.

WALLACE ASKED TO RAISE FARM PRICE ON MILK

Retail Rate Likely to Go Up if Plea Is Granted.

A request for an increase to farmers of 20 cents a hundred pounds in the price of milk they produce for the Chicago area was forwarded to Secretary of Agriculture Wallace in Washington yesterday following a meeting of milk dealers and representatives of the Pure Milk association, farmers' bargaining agency, at the Great Northern hotel.

This would mean an increase of .43 of a cent a quart, and would boost the price received by the farmers for their product from the present price of $2 a hundred pounds to $2.20 [4.73 cents a quart].

It was regarded as almost certain that the increase would be granted, and with the increase it appeared probable that the price of milk to the Chicago consumer will be increased from 10 to 11 cents a quart.

First Such Action in 18 Months.

The petition sent to Secretary Wallace was the first joint action of its kind in more than 18 months since the first federal milk marketing agreement was put into effect. Previously the farmers have dealt directly with the Agricultural Adjustment Administration in asking for price increases.

In regard to a possible increase in the cost to the consumer, Dr. D. B. Peck, an official of the Bowman Dairy company, signified that the price would go to 11 cents if the increase to the producers is approved. Other dairy company officials refused to comment.

The two increases—the one to the farmer and the other to the distributors—would provide a wider margin to dealers with which to pay farmers in accordance with the prices fixed by the AAA.

Price Spread Small, Says Geyer.

Don Geyer, manager of the Pure Milk association, declared that the Chicago spread between the purchase price of milk and the sale price is the smallest of any city in the United States.

Another problem discussed at the meeting, and one which took up the greater part of the time, was the present tangled financial condition of the federal milk license pool established by the AAA. The charge had been made by A. M. Krahl, spokesman for the Pure Milk association, that the pool owed the farmers some $200,000.

Declares Pool Has Balance.

"The milk equalization pool has a substantial balance, and is able to take care of all obligations," he said. "However, as a result of the narrow spread between the price to farmers and retail price, some distributors in Chicago have lost money in the milk business. Because of this, they have been slow in paying the farmers."

In the pool operation, dealers were charged for milk they purchased according to the usage of the milk—for fluid sale, cream, cheese, or butter.

In the discussion of the increase in the price paid farmers, the farmers had asked for a price of $2.25 a hundred pounds, and the $2.20 figure finally reached was a compromise. For their part of the compromise the dealers promised to do their best to straighten out the financial snarl of the milk pool.

PERSHING UNINJURED WHEN HE IS KNOCKED DOWN BY AUTO DOOR

Washington, D. C., Jan. 11.—(AP)—Gen. John J. Pershing escaped injury this afternoon when he was knocked down by the open door of his motor car in front of the Carlton hotel.

The general had just alighted from his car, friends said, when several acquaintances approached him. He stood chatting with them. Another car came into the driveway and the general's chauffeur, not realizing the door had not been closed, started to drive away.

Gen. Pershing was knocked down to the cement driveway, but was not injured and, after lunching, returned to his office in the state State, War and Navy building and continued working all afternoon as usual.

$565,000 RECORD BAIL SET FOR SIX BANDIT SUSPECTS

Gang Reported Named in True Bills.

Total bonds of $565,000, said to be a record high for the Cook county Criminal court, were set yesterday for six youths reported named in true bills charging them with robbery. Identified in 100 robberies, the gang members are alleged to have specialized in the practice of kidnaping their victims, robbing and beating them, and then ejecting them from the moving bandit car.

Those reported named in the true bill and their bonds are: George Besenhofer, 18 years old, a "graduate" of the St. Charles reformatory and alleged leader of the band, $155,000; his brother, Frank, 20 years, $115,000; Robert Beebe, 22 years old, $115,000; a third Besenhofer brother, Fred, 22 years old, $60,000; William Babiak, 18 years old, $60,000, and William Labushevicz, 19 years old, $60,000.

Linked to Carlson Robbery.

Higher bonds were set for George and Frank Besenhofer and Beebe because of their alleged participation in the robbery of Roland Carlson, 25 years old, 1132 North Menard avenue, said to have been the most brutal of the gang's acts. Carlson was seized on Dec. 29, robbed, beaten, and left unconscious at Menard avenue and Thomas street.

Assistant State's Attorney Raymond Drymalski, who presented the case to the grand jury, said that he had selected the cases in which the state could most easily win convictions. He announced that he would move for immediate trial.

2 Bandits and Girl Sentenced.

At the same time two bandits and their girl companion, who used methods similar to the gang of six, were sentenced by Judge Walter P. Steffen in the Criminal court. Leo Kuta, 23 years old, and Steve Lazarz, 25 years old, were sentenced to one year to life in prison on charges of robbery. Their girl companion, Mildred Pelk, 18 years old, was sentenced to one year in the Bridewell.

The trio was sentenced for the robbery of Robert Challfoux, 3430 Lexington street, who was kidnaped, beaten and robbed on Dec. 12, 1934. Miss Belk, who told the judge that she was Kuta's sweetheart and participated in robberies on his order, aroused Kuta's anger when she announced in court her intention of pleading guilty.

"Wait till I get out," Kuta told her, "I'll fix you."

He was silenced and warned by Prosecutor Drymalski.

ELECTROCUTED ON FIRE ESCAPE.

While working on his radio antenna on the fire escape of his second floor apartment yesterday, Anthony Lockridge, colored, 25 years old, 1300 South Union avenue, a porter, was electrocuted when the aerial accidently touched a live electric wire.

SWIFT EMPLOYE HELD ON $50,000 BOND FOR THEFT

Thomas J. Smart, 42 years old, was held to the grand jury in bond of $50,000 yesterday by Judge Matthew D. Hartigan in the Felony court on the charge of embezzling $27,720 from Swift & Co., where he had been a trusted employé for 16 years.

Mrs. Smart, who had been reported separated from her husband, sat through the court hearing. Through Smart's attorney, Grover C. Ballinger, she denied that she was separated from her husband and announced that she would "stick to him" through his trouble.

Officials of the Swift company announced yesterday that the total embezzlement had reached $33,325 and that investigation of books and records was still in progress. Charles A. Russell, assistant controler of the packing concern, displayed 58 canceled checks which he said made up the bulk of the embezzlement.

"He admitted taking the money," Russell said. "He said he spent some of it foolishly and some wisely for various purposes. He admitted gambling away part of it, but said no women were involved."

Court Frees Ira L. Couch in Reckless Driving Case

Ira L. Couch, 1350 North State street, was freed by Judge Edgar A. Jonas yesterday of charges of reckless driving and leaving the scene of an accident. On Sept. 22 Couch's car went over the curb at East Chicago avenue and Rush streets, injuring two taxicab drivers. The attorney for the injured men failed to produce witnesses in court, and Couch explained that he had left the scene only to telephone his attorney. He appeared a few hours later at the police station.

DIES OF AUTOMOBILE FUMES.

Overcome by fumes from his automobile in the garage behind his home, Elvin E. Shoebottom, 64 years old, 1672 Edgewater avenue, died yesterday in spite of efforts of an inhaler squad that worked over him for an hour.

BARNET HODES WILL GET CIVIC SERVICE AWARD

Barnet Hodes, who is active in movements for the betterment of the city, has been named by the Junior Association of Commerce to receive its civic service award for 1934.

This was announced yesterday by George W. Young, president of the senior Association of Commerce, who headed the award committee. Hodes was chosen from among a large group of nominees between the ages of 21 and 35 who performed outstanding service for Chicago last year. Blaine Cummings, president of the junior association, will give Hodes the award at a dinner in the Auditorium hotel Jan. 22.

NO MORE DELAY.

In his latest article on Chicago's progress Arthur Evans says that "modern, high speed [street] cars which will give the public a faster ride in more comfortable seats and take noise from the streets are accounted one of the essentials in making Chicago first among world cities."

Legal and financial obstructions have been pleaded against immediate action, but in our opinion they are not decisive. It is conceded that the nineteen million dollars replacement fund would not be sufficient to rehabilitate and modernize all the street equipment, but it is enough with which to make a good start. If it would not pay for many entirely new cars, it would go a long way in modernizing old cars and in reducing noise and other evils from which the community is in urgent need for relief. It is true that permission to draw upon the replacement fund for these improvements must be obtained from Judge Wilkerson, but we cannot think any reasonable expenditure would be refused since the replacement fund was accumulated for precisely the object of progressive improvement.

At any rate, permission ought to be sought without further delay. There is no real need to wait for the passage of an ordinance. From the standpoint of public policy and favorable relations between the companies and their patrons, it is better for the companies to show a disposition to try every possible means of prompt relief rather than to find excuses for inaction or show a disposition to coerce the city government for favorable terms of settlement. There is crying need for the betterment of our transportation at the earliest practicable moment and a vigorous initiative is called for. We have been too long in the doldrums. An advance can be made with present resources and should be. It would employ labor and mitigate present discomforts and lay the best possible foundation for satisfactory settlement of outstanding differences.

DISARMING THE CITIZENRY.

A reader, whose letter is published in part in the Voice of the People, proposes that the government take over our munition factories and impound every gun or weapon that can be used to injure a citizen.

THE TRIBUNE favors neither proposal. Munition supply, actual and potential, is a function of national defense and one of primary importance. It will not be efficiently performed if left entirely in the hands of any burocracy. This is not mere theory. It has been demonstrated in experience. The backwardness of government bureaus, including those of the war department, is notorious. Prompt, adequate, and up-to-date supply cannot be relied upon from politics and burocracy.

As for impounding all firearms, it cannot be done without the repeal or substantial qualification of one of the guaranties of the bill of rights, the second amendment, which reads: "A well regulated militia being necessary to the security of a free state, the right of the people to keep and bear arms shall not be infringed."

This does not prohibit any regulation or restraint upon the possession or carrying of any deadly weapon. Cooley in his standard work, "Constitutional Limitations," says: "The federal and state constitutions therefore provide that the right of the people to bear arms shall not be infringed; but how far it may be in the power of the legislature to regulate the right we shall not undertake to say." In Thomas James Norton's "The Constitution: Its Sources and Applications," the author, commenting in the second amendment, remarks: "This means the arms necessary to a militia and not dirks, pistols and other deadly weapons." But the Supreme court of Georgia, while sustaining an act forbidding the carrying, either publicly or privately, of a dirk, sword-cane, Spanish stiletto, belt or pocket pistol or revolver, excepted revolvers on the ground that if a weapon is suitable for the equipment of a soldier the right of carrying it cannot be taken away. This distinction, we are confident, would be sustained and the rule disposes of our correspondent's proposal.

But waiving the constitutional difficulty, there is formidable objection to depriving the citizen of means of self-defense. For example, Col. Calvin Goddard, professor of police science and research director of the crime detection laboratory in Northwestern university, emphatically disapproves of it and would encourage the possession of firearms by law abiding citizens. Professional police opinion seems to be divided, but we think the weight of informed judgment is against our correspondent.

THE JAPANESE AND, FOR INSTANCE, CUBA.

Finance Minister Takahashi warns his countrymen against overinvestment, public or private, in Manchukuo. He said that an annual expenditure of 140 million yen in that country was too much and that the army itself would have to consider the advice of the finance department. Manchukuo, he said, was a foreign country and that had to be taken into account when investments were concerned.

The Japanese official view of the status of what used to be Manchuria is generally regarded as purely fictitious, but sometimes the other fellow's shoes offer a good standing as a point of view. As the Japanese looked at Cuba while the Platt amendment was in effect, they might have perceived a land which was free and not free. The United States had been long distressed by disorders in a country near by, under the rule of Spain. The objection to a continuance of misrule grew until, in consequence of the detonation of such a percussion cap as the destruction of the battleship Maine, America went to war. Cuba was separated from the jurisdiction of Spain and, in American opinion, it was made a free and independent republic.

It would hardly be contended that there was nothing but altruism in this, because there were some very substantial American interests in the island, and the Cuban sugar economy dovetailed into American needs. Nevertheless, it was a great civilizing step, unfortunately defeated of late in many of its aims by the instability of Cuban political elements, an instability greatly affected by depression—hard times on the sugar plantations.

Cuban disorders were lessened, the health of the island was improved, and it had peace. It was free with certain limitations. It could not make treaties with foreign nations without the approval of the United States and it could not undertake to jeopardize its liberty by unwise financial arrangements. It was not to permit domestic disorders and disturbances.

If the Japanese should say that in Manchuria they somewhat, if not altogether, followed the example of the United States in Caribbean problems, not only in Cuba but in Haiti and Venezuela, not forgetting Panama and the Canal Zone, it might be difficult for an American to point out substantial differences. They may exist but there is a superficiality at least of resemblance in what occurred in American Caribbean spheres of influence and what occurred in Asiatic regions which have a profound influence upon Japanese affairs.

To look at another field of operation, it may be that the Japanese, observing how France and Italy are at present endeavoring to seek a foundation for peace in reconciling their interests in vast domains in Africa, might not understand why they are selected to be outside the sanctions for such territorial expansion.

The wide distribution of occidental bayonets and procurators, machine guns, naval cannon, and traders throughout the world might serve to indicate to the Japanese that they had invented nothing new in Manchuria and, in truth, could be accused of unimaginative imitation.

ANOTHER MILESTONE.

We have frequently observed that safety in air travel within the near future is just as certain of attainment as safety at sea or in railroad or highway transport because the industry is never content with its latest performance. As hazards are developed through experience or theory, the research departments of the various airplane manufacturers immediately set to work on the problem. The latest demonstration of this characteristic has been supplied by the United Air Lines through their announcement that within the month all of their planes in transcontinental service will be equipped with new safety appliances known as de-icers.

Most of our readers have in the past followed the stories of the flights of Lindbergh, Chamberlain, Post, Byrd, and others with deepest interest and can recall the total disappearance of other aviators who were not successful. Experts in most of the latter cases assigned as a cause for failure in midocean "ice on the wings." To the average layman the only method of overcoming this difficulty would be to avoid those latitudes and altitudes where the temperature is sufficiently low to produce this phenomenon—not so the aviation industry. Their research departments attacked the problem with the aid of the Goodrich Rubber company and the de-icer is their answer. The leading edges of the wings and other exposed parts of the plane are equipped with rubberized shoes which may be inflated and deflated alternately by the pilot. Any ice that has been formed is cracked and swept away by the windstream. The giant bird rids itself of the dangerous accumulation by shaking its wings.

Editorial of the Day

A CASE STUDY.

[Decatur Herald.]

It is easy to be dogmatic about some other man's problem and many of the persons most violent in their criticisms of relief administration might be embarrassed if called upon to do the work themselves. Here is an example from real life, on which readers may try their wits:

A man complains bitterly that he is given a relief check of only $8, while a neighbor, with a family of the same size, in the same general circumstances, is given $12.

Inquiry at the relief headquarters shows that the statement is true. The relief workers know all about these two families, and just how they live. The first man, they say with admiration, is a "hustler." He takes whatever he can get of relief, then goes out with energy and determination to find odd jobs by means of which he earns as much again, every week. It isn't easy to find any sort of work, but this man's ingenuity has been such he has never failed to bring in enough additional earnings to support his family.

The man in the second family, on the other hand, is a discouraged, helpless sort without much initiative or skill. There are few things he knows how to do. He simply has no idea at all how to find any sort of odd job to supplement the relief check. To keep his family from actual suffering, relief workers have felt obliged to award larger sums to that family.

Now here is the question: Ought a man who has the grit and the energy to go out and do something for himself be penalized for it, in a smaller relief allotment? Before making a hasty answer, let it be recalled that it is the duty of the relief workers [1] to keep families from suffering; [2] to make public funds go as far as possible. It is not in a relief worker's power to make a "hustler" out of an inferior sort of human being. All the same, paying a premium for lack of ability goes against the grain. Just what, gentle reader, would you do?

While the question is under advisement it may be observed that it is just such a situation as this that gives emphasis to the President's recent statement, that the dole is demoralizing and must be replaced by a chance for all to work.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

How to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

AND HERE'S SOMETHING the human race is very badly in need of—the "mechanical brain." The first one is now being completed at the electrical school at the Uni. of Penn. It has a very highfalutin name, "differential analyzer," but just the same it's a mechanical brain and among other of its many accomplishments is the solving of problems in higher mathematics in fifteen minutes that would require four months' work by five mathematical technicians. What a help that mechanical brain is going to be to us. We can just use our regular brains in the tops of our heads to hang our hats on. That's about all the use a lot of us make of our brains, anyhow. But now we don't need to bother about thinking for ourselves at all; we can just turn a gadget in the mechanical brain that we can keep right by us all the time.

It ought to be a wonderful help to the hit-and-run driver; it may be nothing but steel and rubber and electricity, but the mechanical brain will have more sense than to drive in such a way as to imperil the lives of children and people generally who are innocently ambling along the street. And an auto directed by a mechanical brain would never weave in and out of traffic nor flash past red light stop signals. A human brain will do those things, but the mechanical brain has got more sense. Then consider a game of bridge where the lady wife trumps her partner-husband's ace. Now the human brain would whisper to the husband to throw a chair at the lady wife or tip over the table and to swear and rare around. But not the mechanical brain; it will just whisper to the husband, "Pipe down! pipe down! you big hunk of cheese! Say something pleasant to the lady wife, for she feels terribly embarrassed. And smile, damn you, smile!" And what a fine thing the mechanical brain will be in congress. And for people who write postcards from Florida and California saying, "Having a grand time, wish you were here." The thinking machine may be only steel and rubber and electricity, but it would probably swallow a half dozen of its own cog wheels and strangle to death before it would be guilty of doing the same kind of thinking that goes on under a No. 6 hat. Or even a No. 7 hat, for that matter.

THE LIGHTHOUSE AT HANNIBAL

They've built a lighthouse down at Hannibal,
The restful river town that loves to dream
Upon the gray bluffs, rising skeletal

The town of Hannibal looks idly down
Upon the Mississippi at its feet,—
It's just an ordinary western town
That loiters where the woods and river meet.

A plain Missouri town it is; and yet
A halo seems to hover in the air
Above it that no comer may forget,
For history and legend linger there.

For once there lived a lad in Hannibal
Whose tracks upon the sandy shores remain,
Whose form the murmuring waters still recall:
The Mississippi's Pilot-Pan, Mark Twain.

As once there lived, and still, in Hannibal,
And everywhere, there live his fancy's mates,
Brave, mischief-loving pals perennial,
Possessed of common, human, boyish traits.

Mark Twain, Tom Sawyer, Huckleberry Finn—
Dream lads, the three today, no more to part,
Companions in adventure, and within
The cloister of a nation's loving heart.

They've built a lighthouse down at Hannibal,
Boldly above the rocky bluffs to stand,
In memory of him, of them, of all
The daring, darling youth throughout the land.

The Mississippi moves on to the sea,
Past Hannibal, past where the lighthouse gleams,
Even as Life moves on perpetually,
Lit by the glowing hope of youthful dreams.

And pilots on the river, night by night,
As long to us its radiance has appeared,
Shall see ahead of them the Mark Twain Light,
And so be guided, comforted, and cheered.

IT WILL BE SUCH A RELIEF when the voting in the Saar basin is over next Monday. It's not only that we hope it will end peaceably and we will no longer dread a new war in Europe into which the U. S. A. may be dragged, but it will be such a relief to have the lady next to you at dinner stop turning to you and saying, "Well, how do you think the plebiscite in the Say-ar is going to come out?" I always tell her that I hope matters in the Zar will end all right, and then she says she wasn't talking of a place called Zar, she was speaking of the Say-ar. It's very grating on the ear, that Say-ar.

ALL RIGHT, yesterday I got chased up an alley again by a police dog slightly bigger than a Jersey cow. Of course he had no muzzle and no leash on. He woofed at me like a southern bloodhound chasing an escaping slave across the ice in the Ohio river. I finally escaped him, and, emerging at the far end of the alley, met a man with a little toy dog—a Pomeranian. And the Pomeranian was stoutly leashed on a strap as big and strong as the Atlantic cable. Now, why is it that little dogs such as Scotties, Dachshunds, Scalyhams, and Pomeranians are invariably on a leash while great hulking, fierce police dogs are always running loose? I'll tell you my idea. I think the owners of police dogs are afraid to get close enough to their darlings to snap a leash to their collars. And I can't blame 'em for that. I wouldn't any more put a leash on a police dog than I would walk up to a wild African lion and place a piece of sugar on his nose and say, "Now, Mildred, snap nicey sugar offem cunning 'ittle nosem, dat a goodie kitty." No, sir, there are just some things that aren't done. Which doesn't make me any happier when I see a great overgrown police dog charging down on me.

GRANDMOTHER'S REMEDIES.

MANY of us look back upon our period of childhood "dosing" with mixed emotions. We realized that grandmother dominated the situation and that what was good for mother when she was a child was good for her children. We can still hear her say: "Now you take this straight off. Didn't I rear six children and every one living, and don't I remember how I brought your mother through an attack of croup when the doctor didn't know what to do and the child nigh choking to death?" Bless her! We sputtered and fussed, but we took what was offered.

We may recall our yearly siege with sulphur and molasses to ward off colds, to enrich the blood, and to get rid of poisons. We had sassafras tea in the spring for the purpose of thinning the blood that had presumably become thick and sluggish during the winter months. How well we remember the goose grease that was applied to the chest, shoulders, and back—rubbed in so vigorously that we sometimes howled with pain. This was a sure preventive of colds, croup, and pneumonia. And then the flannel pad that was pinned to the underwear or hung by straps from the neck. Great faith was placed in asefetida and certain children wore a little bag of this noxious substance constantly for the purpose of driving away contagion.

The best remedy for a severe sore throat was the use of an old, unwashed wool stocking wrapped securely around the throat. In the morning, so tradition ran, the sore throat would have disappeared. Even now we occasionally see rheumatism rings made of a horseshoe nail, the pocket horse chestnut, the rings that allayed the pains of teething, and the amber necklaces to cure goiter.

We were told to do or not to do so many things that we became bewildered. Windows at night had to be tightly closed in order to keep out the damp air. Infants were never out of doors after dark because of the "night air." Rubbers were never worn in the house because we would develop weak eyes. Grandmother always said that putting a wad of brown paper—the type commonly used by butchers—between the upper lip and the teeth and holding it firmly would stop nosebleed. If we had become unusually tired from playing too hard and became restless in our sleep we were given a dose of worm medicine. If a child ground his teeth during sleep that was a certain sign that he had worms. We had repeated to us over and over again when, for instance, we asked for an apple at bedtime, "Fruit is gold in the morning, silver at noon, but lead at night."

When we developed a cold what a fuss there was, with more goose grease, with flaxseed and onion poultices, and sweating under heaps of blankets in a tightly closed room. I once tested a flaxseed poultice that encased a child's chest and found that it weighed nearly four pounds. The little patient had pneumonia and was breathing thirty times a minute. The chest muscles were compelled to raise each minute a weight equivalent to 120 pounds. Every hour these same muscles lifted three and a half tons. Of course the weight was not lifted any great distance and the heat of the poultice was of value, but the poultice just had to be.

Fortunately, most medical folklore contains a grain of truth here and there. Sassafras tea compelled the child to drink quantities of water. The sulphur and molasses did no harm. While the ordinary diet contains an adequate amount of sulphur, we know that the body is subject to a steady sulphur loss in the growth of hair. Goose grease is still used and probably always will be, and so is camphorated oil, for we know that camphor has some effect in stimulating the circulation. There is no difference in the digestibility of fruit at any stated period of the day, although its effect on the intestines is usually greater when taken on an empty stomach.

Every succeeding generation will use some of grandmother's remedies. All that any one can do, grandmother or physician, is to assist nature.

WOMEN'S SHOES.

A. F. S. writes complaining of present day styles in women's shoes, with the 4 inch heel and the foot at an angle of 30 or more degrees.

REPLY.

We follow a great many fads that are fashionable but not healthful. Changes in women's styles, on the whole, however, have been in the interest of health. The wasplike waist of the gay '90s has gone; the 500 bone corset has been replaced by a sensible elastic girdle, and the 15 gored skirt has surrendered to a common sense garment. Of course, a 4 inch heel is senseless and will place an undue strain on the tarsal arch. If this style of shoe is worn for any appreciable length of time the business of orthopedic surgeons will be increased.

BIG BOY.

A. F. writes: Though I am only 15½ years old, I have the appearance of a boy of 18 years, and have completed my high school work. This last year when I was examined I was told I had a heart murmur and high blood pressure. Is this condition permanent? Is there a chance that the diagnosis was wrong? When I visit a doctor I am afraid—not physically but mentally—and my heart beats very fast.

REPLY.

You may have some heart difficulty, but the probability of high blood pressure at your age is slight. Under apprehension the blood pressure of any one will rise. I would suggest another examination. Perhaps you can rest in the physician's office half an hour or more before the examination. Heart murmurs are often of little significance.

EMPHYSEMA.

J. H. H. writes:

1. What is emphysema?
2. What are the symptoms?
3. What can be done?

REPLY.

1. Emphysema is caused by a permanent dilatation of some of the air sacs in the lungs.
2. Patients with emphysema wheeze, breathe with difficulty, and seem unable to get sufficient air. Overexertion increases the symptoms.
3. A simple device that has helped many cases is the wearing of a strong, snug binder around the body at the level of the lower ribs.

CLAIM AGAINST ESTATE.

Chicago, Jan. 8.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Father and mother died in Iowa. The will reads: Insurance and furniture to oldest sister; estate to be divided equally between five children. 1. I have filed claims that amount to more than they say the estate is worth. I received a letter from executor's attorney stating if I did not appear in person or by writing they were going to court and settle the estate. 2. That means they figure I'm out. 3. Do funeral expenses come out of insurance or estate? 4. If I do not agree to their claims can they settle estate without me? 5. What happens then? 6. Can they get a clear title? 7. Is there a specified time in which I have to go down there to investigate? I am told the oldest boy has father's property, which he bought with [8] his insurance in [9] his name. 10. Can I do anything about this?

C. W. H.

1. It is not clear that you mean the other heirs have filed such claims or that outside creditors have filed such claims. The effect depends on the proof in support of the claims and on the defense that the executor makes.
2. This conclusion does not necessarily follow from the bare facts you state.
3. It would come out of the estate unless the insurance policy authorizes some other arrangement.
4. This would be possible.
5. We are not in a position to say.
6. See 4.
7. We suggest that you try writing to the clerk of the court.
8 and 9. The antecedents of these pronouns are not clear.
10. Rights in insurance money would depend on the wording of the insurance policies.

DIVORCE PROCEEDINGS.

Chicago, Jan. 8.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—About two years ago my sister-in-law and her husband separated. He went to Indiana and she came to Chicago from a little town in Michigan. About two months ago she heard from a friend that her husband had gotten a divorce. She has never been notified, but [1] he claims he had it published in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. She wrote to him by registered letter, but received no answer. 2. She would like to know if she really has a divorce. How can she get the information? C. E. T.

1. The Illinois statute authorizes divorce on publication and mailing where the defendant's residence is unknown, but it seems probable that the evidence was based on a false affidavit and that for this reason the divorce is invalid.
2. We would advise her to have the record carefully investigated by an attorney before she relies on the validity of the divorce. If the case was handled in Chicago, it would be in either the Circuit or Superior court.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

TERMS OF WILL.

Chicago, Jan. 8.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—My uncle made a will some time ago setting aside certain money in a trust fund for minor children and appointed his oldest son, 26 years old, as trustee and executor. This son, one of the beneficiaries under the will, has since moved out of the state, and I am told that for this reason the will may be broken. Is this true? S. B.

A nonresident could serve as trustee, but he could not serve as executor. This, however, would not invalidate the will. The court would appoint an "administrator with the will annexed" who would carry out the will.

TREATY OF VERSAILLES: A PRETTY PLAYTHING

DISARMING THE CITIZENRY.

Chicago, Jan. 3.—As a suggestion, with the prestige and power that THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE carries with our people, would it not be a good thing for your paper to advocate the government taking over our munition factories and impounding every gun or weapon that can be used to injure a citizen?

Personally, I am very strong for this. I believe today, when the government convicts a man of robbing another man or pay roll or individual with a machine gun or revolver, that that man should be declared a traitor to his country as bearing arms against a fellow citizen and should be taken out and shot within thirty minutes after conviction. You would have a terrific battle to fight and one that you would probably enjoy if you thought you were right, because the arms or munition companies are almost as well entrenched in the United States politically as are the breweries in England.

I can see no reason why it is necessary for any one to have a revolver or gun that is used solely for one purpose—to intimidate or to kill—and I cannot understand why our government permits it to go along as it has, as the state governments evidently are not able to cope with this situation.

There seems to be a move by the Washington authorities to prevent the profits in war. If so, why can't they spend some of their spending money in buying out the manufacturers of arms and taking them over strictly to manufacture arms for the army and navy of the United States, and for no other country, and at the same time impound every gun? Even the hunter in the north could take the barrel of his gun and put it with the county clerk and take it out when the season for deer hunting is open, paying his license and returning it with a report of his "kill" at the end of the closed season. I believe laws could be passed even in our wild west, where the men with certain reputation could obtain the gun wherever necessary to use it for killing depredating animals, but not for the killing of a human being.

CLAY BAIRD.

FAMILIARITY.

Chicago, Jan. 3.—On Sunday, Dec. 30, there appeared in your paper an article about the Buena Memorial Presbyterian church and its pastor, Dr. Henry Hepburn. It was a fine article up to the last line.

Being an officer and having been active in this church for nearly 12 years has given me the friendship and acquaintance of a great number of our members, yet I have never heard a single person call Dr. Hepburn Hank. His is a personality so exceptional, so sincere that no one who really knows our pastor would take the liberty to call him Hank.

Therefore, Mr. Editor, I think that the least you could do would be to beg Dr. Hepburn's pardon or show your regret by printing this protest. W. J. D.

CHRISTMAS TREE BONFIRE.

Stockton, Ill., Jan. 5.—The cartoon by Orr depicting the ignominious end of the Christmas tree on a garbage heap was popular here, as it appeared on the day set here for the burning of 90 Christmas trees used for street decoration.

Rather than see the trees end up bedraggled in the alleys, Boy Scouts gathered them up and burned them at night in our hill park overlooking the town.

CHARLES SUGHROE.

IN THE FORTY-FIRST WARD.

Chicago, Jan. 3.—It has been stated that the Nash-Kelly organization proposed to allow certain Republican aldermen to continue to represent their respective wards in the city council, but it would bitterly oppose the reelection of Ald. James C. Moreland of the Forty-first ward, who has been outspoken in his criticism of Mayor Kelly and Patrick A. Nash, Democratic leaders.

It is doubtful whether the citizens of our ward would submit tamely to being deprived of the right to choose their representative in the city council. The Forty-first ward has a record for independent thinking and voting which extends over many years. In the past, when the city administration was Republican and the Thompson machine sought to dominate this section, the citizens demonstrated their independence by retiring Ald. Edward R. Armitage, who was then Thompson's floor leader in the council, and for four successive terms elected a Democratic alderman from this normally Republican territory.

In the last aldermanic campaign the late Mayor Cermak, smarting under equally outspoken criticism by Ald. Moreland, likewise decreed that he be deprived of his seat and every effort was exerted to defeat him, but the people rallied to his support and he was reelected. In that campaign certain floaters were apprehended, brought to trial, convicted, and sentenced to the county jail through the efforts of public spirited citizens residing in Norwood Park and Edison Park. Men and women of both political parties interested in maintaining the integrity of the right of franchise participated in that trial.

With this type of citizenry to reckon with it is highly probable that the Forty-first ward will again be represented by a man of its own choice, regardless of the efforts of political bosses of both parties to nullify the election.

CARL M. JOHNSON.

DUAL CITIZENSHIP.

Chicago, Jan. 5.—The recent liberal offer by the German government of a trip across with all expenses paid to those natives of the Saar who are willing to vote in the plebiscite makes our Forty-second ward politics look like child's play; that these votes will be cast in favor of those sponsoring these trips is very apparent.

But I feel sorry for those citizens who deliberately submitted to this offer and their citizenship ought to be revoked.

I am Russian born and have been naturalized. Under the ruling of the immigration authorities who permitted those citizens to vote in the Saar, doesn't it seem just as logical for me to vote in my birthplace whenever there is an election for a central or local soviet commissar?

Permit me to quote the following oath of allegiance when naturalized: "I do solemnly declare on oath that I will absolutely and entirely renounce and abjure all allegiance and fidelity to any foreign prince, potentate, state, or sovereignty, and particularly to ——, of whom I have heretofore been a subject."

G. O. P. MAYORAL FAVOR SHIFTING TO A. F. ALBERT

Week-End Conferences to Pick Candidate.

BY PERCY WOOD.

At conferences over the week-end substantial elements in the Republican party are expected to unite behind a mayoral candidate, according to word being circulated last night. The direction of the light of favor could not definitely be determined, but it appeared to be shining toward former Ald. Arthur F. Albert, who had a colorful career in the ten years that he represented the Forty-third ward in the city council.

With only six days remaining before the close of filings, the only Republican candidates of consequence are Attorney Emil C. Wetten and Mrs. John Wesley Gray. Wetten's petition was filed Jan. 2 and Mrs. Gray has announced that she will file Monday.

Committee at Work on Problem.

Neither has been indorsed by the Republican city central committee, which has had a subcommittee pondering the question of candidates for several weeks. Last night it was reported that a number of committeemen have approached Albert and that leaders of large factions are looking upon him as the best candidate who could hope to make a showing against Mayor Kelly, who is certain of renomination by the Democrats.

In the last ten days the Wetten boom has lost ground, some of the leaders say. The questions to be answered over the week-end, as one of them put it, are twofold. First, would most factions prefer Albert above Wetten? If so, will Albert run.

Money Question Bothers Leaders.

The question of money is troubling the Republican leaders, but they do not intend to let the mayoralty pass without putting up a fight.

Albert was elected to the council in 1921 when he was 21 years old. He was a hammer and tongs crusader against a former city administration during the years that group ruled the city hall. In 1930 Albert, running under the Deneen banner, was nominated for president of the Cook county board, but was defeated by the late A. J. Cermak.

The following year he was in a three cornered fight for the mayoral nomination, but lost to a former Republican mayor, who was defeated by Cermak. Albert has not since been active in politics.

WARNS BEER TAX FORCES BREWERS TO CUT QUALITY

Institute Head to Ask U.S. to Reduce Levy Half.

An exorbitant federal tax is gradually forcing brewers to produce an inferior grade of beer to make a fair profit, according to a statement issued yesterday by Arnold Spencer Wahl, director of the Wahl Institute of Brewing. Mr. Wahl announced that he would appear before the federal alcohol control board on Jan. 21 in an effort to gain remedial measures.

In order to assure the public good beer, Mr. Wahl said, the government should cut in half the federal tax of $5 a barrel and force the brewer to place a true statement of the quality of his product on the beer labels. He said these measures would bring a five cent glass of beer and fair profit to brewer, distributor, and dispenser.

As an example of present conditions, Mr. Wahl pointed to the case of a large eastern brewer who sold 100,000 barrels of beer for $1,100,000 during the first eight months of 1934. A total of $500,000 was paid in federal tax and $100,000 in state taxes.

"This left him $500,000 for his product," Mr. Wahl said, "or a net sales price of $5 for each barrel to the brewer. The beer cost $4 a barrel to produce, so that his gross profit per barrel is $1, which is insufficient to properly administer the brewery.

"From a barrel of beer approximately 320 twelve ounce glasses are obtained, for which the dispenser would obtain $32 at 10 cents a glass, or $16 at 5 cents a glass. The dispenser pays approximately $14 for the barrel of beer from a distributor, so that his profit at 5 cents a glass would be too small to conduct business and at 10 cents his profit is over 100 per cent."

A proper distribution of cost, tax, and profit, for a barrel of beer, Mr. Wahl said, would be: Cost of production, $4; federal tax, $2.50; state tax, $1; price to distributor, $9; price to dispenser, $11, and price to consumer, 5 cents a glass.

The measure of true excellence of beer, Mr. Wahl said, lies in the "original extract" from which the beer is produced.

"For example, to insure good beer," he said, "the brewer should be forced to label his bottle with some such statement as 'Brewed in at 14 per cent original extract.' This means that for every 100 pounds of beer we have 14 pounds of substance dissolved from the original grains used in its production."

LIBERAL PASTORS FAVOR MEDICAL STUDY WITH DOGS

The Liberal Ministers association of Chicago has gone on record opposing the proposed repeal by the city council of the Arvey ordinance which allows stray dogs in the city pound to be used for medical research, it was announced yesterday. A mail canvass of the association brought no dissenting votes.

Edwin H. Wilson, secretary of the Liberal association, announced that at the same time a massmeeting protesting the ordinance's repeal will be held on Monday afternoon by friends and members of various liberal churches and synagogues at the college of medicine, University of Illinois. Talks and motion pictures on work of the research departments will be presented.

Among the association ministers protesting the repeal are T. C. Hume, A. A. McBride, R. B. Bragg, W. H. Caughran, C. W. Reese, Ernest F. Tittle, Fred Merrifield, W. H. Moore, and R. J. Watson.

Through the effort of anti-vivisectionists, the Nelson amendment now is before the city council. It would prohibit the use of dogs from the city pound for medical research.

RAIL ACCIDENT KILLS BRAKEMAN.

MAYOR FAVORS MEDICAL CENTER FOR WEST SIDE

Following a conference with Dr. Karl A. Meyer, and former Ald. James B. Bowler yesterday, Mayor Kelly gave his enthusiastic approval to plans for the establishment of a west side medical center in the area bounded by Congress, West Harrison, South Lincoln and South Wood streets.

Dr. Meyer, medical superintendent of the County hospital, conceived the plan five years ago, and Mr. Bowler has supported the idea with him since that time.

The plan calls for the razing of all buildings now in the area, and the construction of a park which would provide open air space for canvalescent hospital patients, a campus for the 3,000 medical and dental students in the vicinity, and a recreation ground for the 2,000 nurses in nearby hospitals.

Dr. Meyer said last night that he hopes to enlist the aid and financial backing of city, state, county and park officials.

WOMEN VOTERS TO ASK TRAINED TAX COLLECTORS

Members of the League of Women Voters will condemn the employment of inferior public servants at two meetings today.

Tax revision and the hiring of trained persons for the levying and collection of taxes will be urged at a meeting of a special committee of the national league at noon. After adjournment the women will attend a forum of the Cook County league on "The use and abuse of civil service," to open at 2 p. m. Both meetings will be held in the Palmer House.

Among the speakers at the forum will be Henry P. Chandler, president of the Civil Service Association of Chicago; James W. Errant, manager of the Municipal Employes' society, and Rodney H. Brandon, former director of the Illinois department of public welfare. Mrs. W. W. Ramsey of the Illinois League of Women Voters will also speak.

Miss Marguerite M. Wells, president of the National league, is chairman of the special committee. It was formed at the league's national convention last April to promote a national campaign for improved personnel in public service.

MAYOR RECEIVES FIRST OF MILLION DRIVING PLEDGES

The first of a million safe driving pledges to be distributed among Chicago residents cooperating in Mayor Kelly's Keep Chicago Safe campaign were signed yesterday by representatives of civic organizations meeting at the mayor's office. Barnet Hodes, director of the drive, announced that distribution of the bulk of the pledges will start today.

George W. Young, president of the Chicago Association of Commerce, was the first to pledge himself to the mayor's endeavor to make Chicago streets safe. He was followed by Mrs. Clifton K. Timmons, chairman of the law enforcement committee of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs, and Edgar Schnadig and George W. Flemming, officials of the Keep Chicago Safe committee.

The distribution of pledges will be accomplished through community divisions of the Mayor's Town Hall Meetings for Safety committee, Mr. Hodes said. Adult signers will receive windshield stickers and children will receive safety pledge buttons.

ITALIAN MOTHER CHAMPION TELLS HOW TO BE HAPPY

Have More Children, She Says; Has 12 Now.

ROME, Jan. 11.—(AP)—To the question, how to be happy though the mother of 12 ever hungry children, Signora Teresa Raschi Loffredi, hailed by Premier Mussolini as one of Italy's "champion mothers," replied: "Have more children."

"My children are my greatest and almost my only joy," she said in an interview in the one room where the 14 Loffredis—six boys, six girls, the mother and the unemployed father—make their home.

"Having more, and my husband's finding a job, are the things I want more than anything else. Only with no work it is difficult to feed them."

Won $342 Prize.

As champion "Madre Polifica" of the province of Rome, Signora Loffredi was received—together with champion prolific mothers from the city of Rome and from each of the other 93 provinces in Italy—by Mussolini, whose campaign for bigger and still bigger families all of them stanchly support.

At the reception, which took place in the Venezia palace, each of the champion mothers was given 4,000 lire (about $342).

Neither Signora Loffredi nor Signora Rita Preziosi, the Rome champion who has eight children and whose husband likewise is unemployed, had to give any great amount of thought as to what to do with the money.

Into the Cooking Pot.

"It's going right into the 'marmitta' [the cooking pot]," they both proclaimed happily. "We'll have something besides spaghetti and beans to eat."

To feed the 12 Loffredi youngsters, incidentally, takes plenty of spaghetti and plenty of beans.

Umberto, the father, said he had to buy one and one-half kilos (about three and one-quarter pounds) of spaghetti and an equal quantity of beans (six and one-half pounds of spaghetti and beans together) each day for the family's principal meal, the "pranzo," at midday. In the evening they eat what's left over.

She's Only 36 Years Old.

Signora Loffredi, who is only 36 years old, and Signora Preziosi, who named one of her five daughters Edda after Mussolini's daughter, both receive help from the Opere Assistenziali, the Fascist relief organization, and every member of both families does his bit toward keeping the "marmitta" full.

Loffredi, when not seeking work in his trade as painter, catches fish in Lake Bracciano, near Rome, where the family lives. He picks up a few lire a week selling them. The children of school age attend school regularly, and the others do what odd jobs they can.

Preziosi gets a little work now and then as a porter in a shipping agency. Rita, besides keeping the home for the 10 Preziosis, is a laundress.

NEWSPAPER AND COKE PLANT LOSE NRA BLUE EAGLES

Telegrams demanding the surrender of their Blue Eagle were received yesterday by the Chicago Defender, Inc., 3435 Indiana avenue, publishers of a Negro newspaper, and the North Shore Coke and Chemical company of Waukegan, a coke plant. The messages said the firms had been found guilty of violating section 7A of the National Industrial Recovery act, the labor provision from which most disputes have arisen.

In the case of the newspaper, 35 union employés were discharged last summer, suddenly terminating an agreement the company had had with the unions for 28 years, according to Thomas Marshall, assistant director of the regional labor board. Edward H. Morris, attorney for the firm, said the discharged employés were replaced with colored workers in line with the racial policy of the paper. Marshall declared, however, that the company turned down an offer of the unions to furnish colored members of the union.

The North Shore Coke and Chemical company was charged with discharging five employés because they had attended a union organization meeting. An official of the William A. Baehr organization, consulting engineers managing the plant, declined to comment.

OIL WAREHOUSE SWEPT BY BLAZE IN TANKER BLAST

Newark, N. J., Jan. 11.—[Special.]—A spectacular fire swept a pier and warehouse of the Sun Oil company this afternoon following an explosion of unknown origin aboard a tanker which was taking 30,000 gallons of gasoline aboard at the time. The damage was expected to reach about $150,000.

Three men aboard the tanker, the Berrin, owned by the Continental Oil company, were thrown into the Passaic river by the force of the explosion. They all swam safely to shore.

An attempt to diminish the loss by cutting the flaming barge loose from the pier nearly resulted in further disaster when the craft floated down to the Lehigh Valley railroad bridge as a freight train was passing over the structure.

The train sped by undamaged, however, and the bridge was raised as soon as it cleared, permitting the burning tanker to continue toward the open bay.

Meantime the flames were rising 200 feet in the air over the Sun Oil warehouse and pier. A series of explosions shook the one and a half story warehouse and in a few minutes it had been leveled.

BRIDE STEALING IS OUTLAWED BY JUGO-SLAVIA

Plans for Exchange of Marriageable Girls.

SKOPLYE, Jugo-Slavia, Jan. 11.—(AP)—The Jugo-Slav government today outlawed bride stealing. In an effort to halt the practice the authorities approved plans for exchange of marriageable girls between southern Serbia and Herzegovina.

A derth of marriageable women in southern Serbia previously had caused professional "bride snatchers," white slave traders, and even parents to sell eligible girls at such high prices that the newlyweds often faced many years' economic bondage.

Sell for Less than Goats.

In Herzegovina, on the other hand, husbands are scarce, available brides too numerous. Marriageable girls often go at prices less than those for goats or cows.

The government, therefore, worked out plans for disposing of Herzegovina's surplus single women in southern Serbia, where, owing to the excess of men, no girl over 16 goes long unwooed or unwed.

Thousands of girls, it was stated today, are being either sold or traded. The surplus would-be bridegrooms in southern Serbia are delighted to pay $25 to $50 for brides from Herzegovina instead of the normal prices in their district of $500 to $2,500.

Brides Waive Dowry Rights.

For their part the prospective brides gladly waive dowry rights, asking only to be assured of shelter and enough food. In Herzegovina food is scarce; in southern Serbia even the poorest never go hungry.

No questions usually are asked about the past of the brides, it is said, the bridegrooms demanding only that they be healthy, romantic, and willing to work on the land.

A sidelight on the economic considerations involved in the practice is the fact that the trade in brides has had the effect of "dumping" on the southern Serbia market, with the result the price of wives has fallen so rapidly that daughters, instead of representing potential wealth to their parents, often prove to be a burden.

SOUTHERN MOB SLAYS COLORED MAN IN A CELL

Franklington, La., Jan. 11.—[Special.]—A mob stole into the county jail early today and shot to death Jerome Wilson, 30, colored, convicted slayer of a deputy sheriff. The Louisiana Supreme court had granted the prisoner a new trial last Monday after he had been convicted and sentenced to hang.

Officers said the mob took the cell keys from the sheriff's office. As the men entered the cell Wilson began screaming at the top of his voice. He was promptly riddled with bullets. His body was then dragged to an automobile and carried three miles north of town, where it was dumped out on a roadside.

Wilson had been charged with killing Delos C. Wood, chief deputy criminal sheriff of Washington parish, during a general shooting last July 22 between colored persons and officers. The fight occurred at the home of Wilson, where the officers had gone to investigate after a live stock inspection had been ordered.

PICK FOUR TO TRY TABER AND KEHOE IN BUS SLAYINGS

The first panel of four jurors to determine the fate of William Taber and Joseph J. Kehoe, veteran officials of the street car men's union, were selected yesterday in Judge William V. Brothers' Criminal court. It took nearly four days to get this panel, which will help decide whether Taber and Kehoe aided and abetted in the murder of James J. Kelly, a dispatcher for the Chicago Motor Coach company, during the recent bus strike.

The first panel of jurors is made up of Harry B. Bloom, 611 North Troy street, a school janitor; Adolph J. Christiansen, 7645 Ibsen street, a telepone service man; Allen L. Paulson, 2251 Giddings street, a paper salesman, and Robert W. Harty, 442 North Austin avenue, Oak Park, unemployed.

Bloom is a member of a union, and Paulson said he is in sympathy with the principle of unionism. The other two jurors have no union connections.

Two veniremen had been tentatively accepted for the second jury panel when court adjourned until Monday.

SATURDAY NEWS OF NEW BOOKS

Short Stories Declared Best of Pirandello

Four Authors Have Roles in Book Week.

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

"Background for Venus," by James Laver. [Knopf.]

"Melissa Starke," by Annulet Andrews. [Dutton.]

"Better Think Twice About It," by Luigi Pirandello. [Dutton.]

THE four volumes of fiction listed above were all published this week. Two of them pin a red [though not a scarlet] letter on the week. In a first novel, Bessie Breuer's "Memory of Love" we happily find talent, real talent, sensitiveness to man and to words. Many young authors have almost supernatural sensitiveness to words and to nature. . . . Josephine Johnson in "Now in November," for instance. Many have almost supernatural sensitiveness to man and his mind. . . . John O'Hara in "Appointment in Samarra," shall we say.

But few first authors have at the same time intense understanding of what and why a person acts and thinks as he does and such a love of words for their own sakes that the perfect emulsion of content and style is made. "Memory of Love" is a book for connoisseurs of fiction.

It is as its title proclaims, a memory told in the first person by the man who after years of lovemaking found love [which was something he had never met before].

The hero is spoiled, arrogant, selfish, and at the end, not man enough for his love. He is probably the modern version of the cad, in these days when there is so much good in the worst of us and so much bad in the best of us. The heroine is in love with her husband and makes herself and the hero often miserable over their love for one another. But out of the intense pages there does, somehow, flow into the reader's consciousness the very essence of their love.

The book is an emotional experience rather than an intellectual one, and yet it is the intellectuals who will find it most fascinating . . . the author's power to distill emotion is remarkable and only those who are intrigued by her technical skill will realize how remarkable the book is. It is not a great book. It is, however, an unforgettable one.

Pirandello Offers Short Stories.

Any week which gives us more of Luigi Pirandello's short stories is a red letter one. "Better Think Twice About It" contains thirteen tales translated from Pirandello's "Novella per un Anno," which many of his fellow Italians have declared to be his greatest work. Even if it was for the more mystic and nebulous work that has recently given the Nobel award in literature. A. W. Hulten, associate editor of "The Swedish Element in America", gave us a translation of the Swedish Academy's citation to Pirandello "For bold and ingenous re-creation of the art of drama and the stage."

The stories which comprise "Novella per un Anno" are after the monumental design of the Arabian Nights. "The Naked Truth," the first selection of thirteen stories from the Pirandello masterpiece, was published last September.

Here's Story of Art Intrigue.

"Background for Venus," by James Laver, is one of those highly proficient, amusing, sophisticated tales which the lesser English novelists turn out with such success and which Americans seem incapable of writing. We have little proficiency in this country with the unimportant light novel for the literate like "Background for Venus." It is a tale of intrigue among the artists and art dealers. It presupposes intelligence in the world of art, although it does not demand a technical knowledge. Most of the innuendoes about pictures and painting which make the book slyly and satirically amusing are mere asides, but the background makes of an ordinary tale one which has dash and allure. The book is unimportant but amusing.

Author Knows Southern Scene.

"Melissa Starke," by Annulet Andrews, is one of those books that start out stunningly with individuality and turn into all the books you've ever read. Many novels do that. "Melissa Starke" does it disastrously. The titular heroine of the book is a little girl in a decaying southern family in the early 1870s, when the book opens. For all of her childhood, which is about a third of the book, the reader is intrigued with the picture of slow disintegration and with the sturdy, courageous child who sees it without herself becoming lost.

But when things begin to happen to Melissa herself, when horror piles on horror, cruelty of aunts on cruelty of other aunts, when she finds that not only father but mother is a morphine addict, when she is left for days and weeks alone in a hovel, when she spends months as an invalid, when she lives her life on the credo "I shall never take morphine, I shall never be a prostitute," the book becomes a sort of mêlée of all the plots you ever read.

The author has obviously worked very hard over the background, knows the scene and describes it with skill. But she has, despite her authenticities, written an unconvincing book. I should say that it is a book to start and then, when you're well settled in the scene, lend to the woman who wishes life were like the movies. She'll find it so, so like in the last half!

O'Neill's Plays Published in New 12 Volume Set

A handsome and definitive edition of the complete plays of Eugene O'Neill has just been brought out in twelve volumes by Charles Scribners Sons. Elmer Adler designed a revolutionary method of setting the text which may become standard. He set the dialog to the full measure of the page, the stage directions in a narrower measure and in italics, making it easy for the reader immediately to differentiate between them. Mr. O'Neill named it "The Wilderness Edition." It is limited to 750 sets, with the first volume of each set signed by the author.

Here's Volume Made to Take on Your Cruise

"Sea Sequel" Companion to "Week-end Book."

BY FRANK SWINNERTON.

LONDON.—[Special Correspondence.]—One of the final publications of the year 1934, was a small but exceedingly full anthology called "Sea Sequel" [Nonesuch Press], which is intended to supply all those adventurers who nowadays travel on cruises, with reading matter for the voyage.

It is what used to be called a compendium, for it contains famous sea stories, poems, and extracts from the work of classic travelers, hints on the treatment of mal de mer, games, dress and fancy dress, the weather, and seamanship.

And it is a sequel [that is the point of its title] to one of the most successful compilations ever published—the famous "Week-end Book" [same publishers] of which more than 125,000 copies have been sold. So excellent a book needs no recommendation to all who possess the earlier volume, but since its appeal is so wide and its quality so high it deserves to be very widely known indeed. Winter cruisers will find in its pages and in its compactness ideal companionship.

Those who are interested in the most modern forms of art are to have a new periodical, nothing less than a review of what is known as "contemporary 'abstract' painting and sculpture."

This is a serious attempt to introduce order into the appreciation of modern art; it will not be the organ of any one set of persons, but it will make the attempt to demonstrate the unity of progressive artists who are trying to escape from the tyranny of appearances into what they believe to be the essential.

The new periodical is to be called "Axis." It will be edited by Miss Myfanwy Evans, and published by the editor from her home at 100 Holland road, London, W. 14. The list of early contributors is striking and includes, among Englishmen, Sir Michael Sadler [father of Michael Sadler, who changed the spelling of his surname in order to avert confusion in the minds of the not-very-alert], and Messrs. Herbert Read, Geoffrey Grigson, Henry Moore, Adrian Stokes, and Paul Nash.

A writer whose work is likely in the future to attract considerable attention from those who care for vigor and enterprise is Ralph Bates. Mr. Bates first impressed a number of readers whose business or pleasure it is to watch anxiously for new talent by an extraordinary work entitled "Thin Men" [Peter Davies], but he is the author also of a novel entitled "Sierra" and he has now written a short but highly enthusiastic book on Schubert [both Peter Davies].

His journalistic activity is considerable. He is still young, his age being thirty-three, and still determined in his search for adventurous and instructive experience. He plans in the near future to spend several months working as a railway mechanic, not merely for the sake of obtaining first hand knowledge of conditions, but as a discipline. He will go far.

The book is issued in a limited edition of 950 copies, with an introduction by John Cudahy, American ambassador to Poland.

Mystery of the Week

BY MORTIMER QUICK.

Finally a book for those fans whose major sports are hocky and murder stories! Cortland Fitzsimmons, in "Crimson Ice" [Stokes], seems to know all about both subjects. In fact, he is so very knowing when it comes to hocky that I, who am not too well up on that most exciting of games, am sometimes a little at sea; but enthusiasts must surely be pleased over the way he handles its intricacies. The story is good, and mysterious, too, ranging from Boston, where the fatal hocky game is played, to Quebec, the Indian country of Arizona, and back again for a final thrilling game in Boston.

'Riddle of Jutland' Is Complete Story of Two War Fleets

According to Langhorne Gibson and Vice Admiral J. E. T. Harper, R. N., authors of "The Riddle of Jutland" [Coward McCann], the famous German "victory" at Jutland was little more than a case of dogged press agenting on the part of the German admirals. They were ignominiously defeated, but they gave out and the world from Berlin to Bangkok and even England herself believed that they had won a great victory. Only years afterward was the truth conceded.

Vice Admiral Harper, now retired, was selected in 1919 to present a report on Jutland to the British admiralty. After months of careful research his findings were so sensational that the report was suppressed.

"The Riddle of Jutland" is the first complete history of the two great fleets of Germany and England from the declaration of war to the armistice.

Pilot Offers Realistic Story of War and His Days in Prison Camp

"Heaven High, Hell Deep," by Norman Archibald [Boni], is another and an even realer "War Birds," realer because Norman Archibald, who tells the story of his training and service in the air corps and his capture and life in German prison camps, is not a professional writer, and so never gives that special burnish to an occasion that Elliot White Springs managed to impart in his "editing" of the anonymous airman's diary.

Norman Archibald writes with passion and fire, but not with technical writing experience, and the result is just that much more vivid. Immediately after the war we had hundreds of books like this personal record, of which only a few approach this in verity. For the last few years the war has rather ceased to be a remembrance of things past in literature.

Helen Hertz in Wedding Gown

[Pach Photo.]

Mrs. Robert M. Levy is the former Miss Helen Betty Hertz. She is the younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Hertz of Chicago and New York. Her marriage to the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward B. Levy of New York took place on Jan. 3 in New York. Mr. and Mrs. Levy sailed last Saturday for a ten month wedding trip to the orient and India.

Gala Benefit for Maternity Center Feb. 4

BY JUDITH CASS.

ANOTHER gay benefit is added to the long list of those of this winter by the Chicago Maternity center taking over the first performance of "The Continental Varieties" at the Studebaker theater on Monday, Feb. 4. That it will be a gala occasion is assured, for Chicago cosmopolites have been looking forward for months to Lucienne Boyer's coming to this city. The toast of Paris, in fact of the entire European continent, she is well known to Chicagoans, who have not heard her in her own cabaret in the Rue de la Michodiere, through phonograph records.

Unlike most Parisian song birds who usually are heralded as bringing with them the latest styles from the Rue de la Paix, Mlle. Boyer always wears the same simple blue velvet gown when she sings, a la Helen Morgan, perched on a piano. It is said that, although not ordinarily temperamental, she has been known to hold up performances until her blue velvet gown arrived.

Dr. Joseph B. De Lee's name is almost synonymous with the Chicago Maternity center, so he, of course, heads the list of those in charge of the benefit. Others who will work to make it a success are Mrs. Kenneth Carpenter, Mrs. James L. Houghteling, Mrs. George H. Schulz, Mrs. Edward K. Welles, Mrs. Ralph E. Hellman, Clark J. Lawrence, John W. Clarke, and Thomas Lemming.

Stravinsky Dinner Reservations Filled.

If the Arts club were several times as large as it is, it undoubtedly could be filled tomorrow night for the dinner for Igor Stravinsky, for twenty-four hours after the invitations were out every reservation had been taken. Every one with any interest in things musical is excited over the Chicago visit of this composer, who has been here only once before, in the winter of 1925. He was entertained by the Arts club at that time, too.

Stravinsky's coming at this time is peculiarly timely, for he is the composer of the music for two of the ballets that were given recently by the Monte Carlo Ballet Russe, "The Firebird" and "Petrouchka."

This Russian born, naturalized Frenchman, who now is fifty odd years old, is the only remaining one of the "three fantastic young men around whose triple talents the Russian Ballet was really built. Serge Diaghileff, the Maecenas, is dead, and Vaslav Nijinsky, the dancer, is mad." I quote from Janet Flanner's "profile" of Stravinsky in a recent New Yorker.

Stravinsky is coming to Chicago primarily to conduct the Chicago Symphony orchestra at the Thursday night and Friday afternoon concerts next week and at the Tuesday afternoon concert the following week. His Petrouchka and Firebird suites, Volga Boatmen, and Symphony No. 1 will be played at next week's concerts, and on Tuesday, the 22d, the program will include the Petrouchka and Firebird suites, a suite from Pulcinella and a new work, a divertimento from "Baiser de la Fée. Dr. Stock and Mrs. Stock leave today for several weeks in Arizona.

Symphony Members to Play at Dinner.

After dinner tomorrow night members of the Chicago Symphony orchestra will give the first Chicago performance of Stravinsky's "Octuor for Wind Instruments." Stravinsky, of course, will be the guest at dinner of the club president, Mrs. Charles B. Goodspeed, and Mr. Goodspeed.

Pavel Tchelitchew, the artist for whom there was a tea at the Arts club yesterday afternoon to open an exhibition of his paintings, will be a guest at the dinner for his countryman tomorow night. Yesterday at the tea Mrs. Eames MacVeagh, Mrs. Dallas B. Phemister, Miss Alice Gerstenberg, and Mrs. William Eisendrath poured while this reporter was there.

The tea also served to display for the first time the lacquer shrine that T. C. Loo of Paris and New York presented to the club in memory of its

A WEST side wisecrack, forwarded by Edward C. Logelin, concerns the night club m. c. who, seeing a diminutive singer of songs at one of the tables, asked her to do a guest number. She consented to sing "Love in Bloom."

Four flats—Nadir—Birthday—Sandwich—Chivalry.

"Key?" queried the m. c.

"Four flats," responded the singer (Anne Andrews).

"In four flats, lady, it's not love in bloom, it's bigamy," retorted the m. c.

THAT people are ready to spend money for music is indicated in two instances this week. Had you passed Orchestra hall yesterday afternoon about 2 o'clock you would have seen a great crowd waiting in the lobby. The house was sold out for Bach's B minor Mass, but music lovers were still trying to get seats. A subscriber who had two seats turned one of them in to the box office with permission to resell it. News of the one available seat spread through the crowd, and out of pockets and handbags came bills, to be waved frantically in the air by eager waiters. The other instance is the Stravinsky concert at the Arts club tomorrow night. All available space has been reserved for some days, and yesterday morning there were fifty-five persons on the waiting list, hopeful of cancelations.

CHIVALRY - is - not - dead - only-dying - department: A young couple boarded the street car the other day and Anne Targ, who got on the car after them, observed that the young woman insisted on paying her own fare. The man objected, but the young woman persisted, handed him 50 cents, and walked on past the conductor into the car. The young man paid the fares and went in to sit beside her, still arguing that she should not have paid her own way. Mrs. Targ thought the matter was ended, but she heard the young woman say:

"But do give me back the change from the half dollar, won't you?"

Good Morning!

Prayer from the heart: "Heaven, please grant us more of George M. Cohan!"

And IF, after seeing "Gambling," you don't join in the supplication—then what's the matter with you, anyway?

The picture over on the Oriental's screen was adapted from Mr. Cohan's stage play. While, as a whole, it is replete with interest, suspense and good acting, it was, so far as my reactions went, a one man show with the great George dominant.

He is Al Draper, owner of a de luxe gambling house that parades under the alias of a private "social club." The police, try as they will, raid as they do, have never been able to discover a roulette wheel, let alone a chip, and the place is patronized by the élite of Manhattan.

When the film opens Al is all athrill over the impending arrival of his adopted daughter, who has been kept in a select French school and is unaware how the man she believes to be her father earns his living and her expensive keep. Al, who'd been her father's best friend, had promised that father on his dying bed to love and care for his baby, Gene. Through the years Draper has been faithful to that trust.

But Gene never comes. . . .

She has disembarked at Quarantine. A telegram received at the dock tells Draper she has eloped with a young man known as Braddock.

News of tragedy follows fast on the heels of the wire and the broken hearted gambler, acting as his own Sherlock Holmes, tracks truth to its lair in a manner the picture shall show you.

Mr. Cohan as Draper is wise without being cyincal, hard boiled without being bitter. Everything he does, says, is utterly in keeping with the character of the sort of man he portrays so humanly. He fills you with admiration and an amazingly keen pity for Draper. You grudge each moment he's out of your sight.

The star has most able support. Dorothy Burgess as a certain Dorothy Kane holds your interest and sympathy from the start. Wynne Gibson never misses a cue as a tough blonde gold digger. Theodore Newton is arresting as a weak, wealthy, and likable playboy. And so it goes.

The plot's upbuild is skilful, and action and dialog are terse and always to the point.

THROUGH THE LOOKING GLASS

[TRIBUNE Studio Photo.]

A hairdress for the business girl, by a Chicago stylist, that combines practicality with attractiveness. It is easy to comb and to wave.

Businesslike but becoming hair styles for business girls are going to be sponsored in this column in 1935! Above you see the first of them, created at our request by the stylist in a Chicago shop.

Here's why it's practical: It's easy to comb. There is a part on the left side, a flat, not too short curl, at the right temple and an easily managed curled roll at the ends. If she were hard up the girl could finger wave this hairdress herself, although, of course, it's always better to have professional asistance. It isn't too fussy for the most querulous office manager. But it is feminine and becoming.

This girl's permanent was almost gone, but she wasn't ready for a new one. That, too, was taken into consideration! The style is adapted not only to her type but to her peculiarly individual requirements. When a hairdresser does this we think he's done a good job.

We voice the sentiments of a number of working girls we interviewed on this subject when we offer two humble suggestions to hairdressers. The first of these is that they come down to earth on styles for the girl who spends eight hours a day earning her living. The too fancy coiffures are about as useful to the working girl as a wardrobe of tea gowns with long trains would be.

The second of these is that they do an honest to goodness job with the hair from ear to ear in back. We know by personal experience as well as from observations that a few hairdressers who lack a conscience deliberately do you dirt with the hair there. When the hair is all plastered down in the finger wave following your trim and shampoo you don't notice it—but three days later you're astounded to see that you actually need another hair cut. That makes us working women mad as hops.

Neither time nor money permits the average business girl to go to a shop oftener than about once in ten days, much as she'd love to get all dolled up every day in the week. So the hairdressers might as well go along with them and cater to their needs. Otherwise, we're warning them, the limited income girl will put an end to the whole business by letting her hair grow or cutting it herself with a bowl and a scissors! ELEANOR NANGLE.

French Theater Presents First American Opera

PARIS, Jan. 11. — (AP) — The first opera by an American ever performed in a French national theater had its world première this afternoon when Samuel Barlow's "Mon Ami Pierrot" was presented at the Opera Comique. The libretto was written by Sacha Guitry, prominent French dramatist. Barlow, a New Yorker, born in 1892, is well known to American and European audiences for his concertos. The matinée, a benefit, was under the supervision of the countess of Chambrun, sister of the late Nicholas Longworth.

The countess, who is 33 years old, was married to Count Karl Theodore Toerring-Jettenbach of Bavaria Jan. 10, 1934. She was before her marriage Princess Elizabeth of Greece and with her husband attended the marriage of her sister, Princess Marina, to the duke of Kent last November.

Pick 1935 Girl as Feature of Benefit Party

Charity Ball Raises Funds for Emerson House.

Miss Deborah Butler, a debutante of the season, was adjudged the perfect streamline girl of 1935 in a contest held early today after a gay supper dance in the Joseph Urban room of the Congress hotel. The affair was sponsored by the board of the Emerson House settlement and about $1,000 was earned, which will be devoted to the welfare of underprivileged boys and girls in the settlement neighborhood.

Miss Butler, gowned in green, was given a perfect rating by the judges, Mrs. George W. Dulany Jr. and William Welch. The arbiters were assisted by deputies who went incognito among the guests and carried back personal reports on the qualifications of the contestants. The prize was a heavy gold bracelet.

The contest for the most proficient continental dancers resulted in victory for Mr. and Mrs. C. Ross Cuthbert. Mrs. Cuthbert, the former Beatrice Kirk, was charming in a black gown with sequins.

The guests were entertained with a professional gypsy floor show and a buck and wing dance by boys and girls from the settlement.

Albert Pattou served as master of ceremonies for the contests. After a half dozen eliminations in the continental dance contest, the last two couples were required to dance with Jimmy Struthers of New York and Eugénie Woodruff, New York society girl, who are appearing professionally at a Chicago night club.

After these exhibtions Walter Frazier and Leif Buch made the decisions. The prize was a bronze plaque polished like gold and painted in white with a dancing girl carrying a laurel wreath. The painting was the work of Mrs. Dulany.

Strikingly attractive in gold lamé, fashioned with a coat of black and gold cellophane, Mrs. Dulany with Mr. Dulany entertained at dinner before the party for Mr. and Mrs. Pattou and the John Roots.

Miss Cynthia Wilson, president of the Emerson House board, could well wear a smile of satisfaction with the party recorded as a marked success long before it was over. Gowned in turquoise blue crêpe, Miss Wilson was escorted by Wells Sinclair in the absence of her fiancé, Dr. Beverly C. Compton.

Mr. and Mrs. Adlai Stevenson, the Ambrose Cramers, and Mr. and Mrs. James B. Douglas Jr., came on to the party shortly before midnight from a large dinner party at the Stevensons' new home at 1246 North State street. Mrs. Stevenson was lovely in white crêpe and a silver jacket. In her blonde hair she wore a slim silver and gold coronet.

One of the smartest gowns on the dance floor was the printed lamé designed with a square neck worn by Miss Muriel Picher, a debutante of the season. Miss Picher was in a party with Miss Nancy Knode, Miss Ruth Leonard, Miss Charlotte Hubbart, Francis Burgweger, Edwin Hulbert, Douglas Leffingwell, and Robert Wolff. Before the ball Miss Knode, another 1934-'35 debutante, entertained at dinner at the home of her parents, the Oliver Knodes, for Miss Leonard who is here from Pelham Manor, N. Y.

A young and attractive foursome were the Nathan Swifts [Nancy Traylor] and the junior Charles Y. Freemans [Helen Marie Castle] who dined together at the home of Mrs. Melvin Traylor before the party. Another lovely white gown was that worn by Mrs. Niblack Thorne, who with Mr. Thorne had an early dinner party for Miss Louise Brewer and her fiancé, Frank H. Wood Jr., Miss Jane Schuttler and William Humphrey.

Three Exhibits at Arts Club; One Is Riddle

BY ELEANOR JEWETT.

Three exhibitions opened yesterday at the Arts club. The two large galleries are devoted to the paintings by Pavel Tchelitchew and African sculpture [Oceanic sculpture, primitive, Negroid, coming from Polynesia and Melanesia], and the round gallery is hung with drawings by Romaine Brooks.

Pavel Tchelitchew is a Russian. This almost explains his paintings. He is, obviously, sensitive, imaginative and neurotic. He obtains effects by simplification and by magnifying. His work is theatrical. Certain of his paintings are repulsive; witness "The Ascension," which is a pagan play upon a Christian title. The Neanderthal types introduced lack all spiritual connotation.

Tchelitchew's finer qualities are seen in the delicate "Head of a Little Girl," in the marvelous handling of the eyes in the Negro head, "Feral Benga," and in the singing face of the boy in "The Choir." His most decorative canvas is "The Passage," richly costumed men play a bull which shows us his hind quarters only.

"The Tennis Player" is an interesting study of a young girl with a heavy mane of tawny hair. She plays an opponent whose reduced figure is thrown on the screen of her racket, an amusing fantasy on the part of the painter. "Girls" is intensely sad, the children are so old, so wise and so forlorn, in spite of their youth.

The sculpture from the early African tribes is as interesting as one has been led to think it by various exhibits in the Field museum and other such galleries. Most of it is in wood; some of the pieces are beautifully carved. A few of the larger silhouettes and statuettes are like gingerbread people, impossible to any but a naïve imagination to have produced or treasured. As the source of much that is moderne in contemporary sculpture the exhibit is worth seeing.

Romaine Brooks is an American who has lived chiefly in France and Italy. Her drawings are impossible to reduce to a sober accounting. They are insipid and childish, and one wonders what merit any one found in them to bring them these many miles for showing in Chicago.

The exhibitions will continue to Jan. 31.

RED STEFAN

By PATRICIA WENTWORTH.

SYNOPSIS.

Stephen Enderby, an Englishman, had lived as a boy on the large Russian estate of his stepfather, and grew up with a peasant couple and their large brood of children, until his mother got him an English tutor. When his mother died he went to live with his guardian in England. After the revolution in Russia, as Stefan Ivanovitch, he became a "secret observer" for England, adopting various peasant rôles to hide his identity. Now Stephen has inherited the fortune of his guardian and is anxious to quit his hazardous work. He is escaping out of Tronsk when he meets and rescues Elizabeth Radin. She is the widow of an executed engineer. Though English her husband was half Russian. She is flying from the advances of Commissar Petroff, who is also anxious to obtain from her a secret formula of her husband's. Stephen takes her with him and tells her his history. They stop at the home of the grandparents of the peasant children Stephen had grown up with, who believe Stephen to be one of their many grandchildren. Stephen tells them Elizabeth is his wife and her name is Varvara. Akulina dislikes the frail woman, as she does Irina, a beautiful communist friend of Stephen's. Irina wanted Stephen herself and resents Elizabeth. Stephen knows she might prove dangerous. He and Elizabeth must get away. They travel by sledge with Yuri to Tronsk. Irina has departed for a nearby collective farm, and Stephen has learned Petroff is there. Stephen leaves Elizabeth in a café and tells her to wait for him. Irina comes in with Petroff. Elizabeth gets away without their seeing her and meets Stephen outside. One of his communist friends has given him his room, where he leaves her while he goes out to investigate. He sees Irina on the street with six men. Hiding in a doorway he hears her tell them to guard the house so that Elizabeth cannot get away. She is going for Petroff, who suspects from the description given him by Irina that Varvara is Elizabeth. Stephen rushes to get to Petroff's house before Irina. He plans to outwit them by denouncing Elizabeth, claiming he never suspected her identity until she began to talk in her sleep. Petroff believes his story, as does Irina. The three go to confront Elizabeth.

INSTALMENT XXIV.

IN PRISON.

Elizabeth could neither think nor move. She could only wait for the door to be broken in.

And then, as she stared at it, she saw the handle move. The latch rattled, the handle moved again.

All at once Elizabeth became able to think and speak. She said in a quiet voice:

"Who is there?"

And Stephen said:

"Open the door—it's me."

A warm weakness flowed over Elizabeth. She had forced herself to such a pitch of self-control, and the danger it was to meet had dissolved unmet. It was as if she had nerved herself for some terrible fall, only to find that the imagined precipice was an illusion. She was so shaken with relief and happiness that for a moment she could not move. Then she ran to the door and turned the key.

The door was pushed open so roughly that she was flung backward, and at once the room was full of people—Stephen, Irina, Petroff, and half a dozen young men pushing eagerly past one another till the last of them was in and the door slammed to.

Elizabeth stood where the thrust of the door had sent her, and looked on this unbelievable scene. She saw Irina who hated her, Petroff from whom she had fled, and a Stephen whom she did not know.

"There, comrade! There she is! And it's for you to say who she is. She's my wife Varvara, all right, but if she's your Elizabeth what's-her-name, you're welcome to her, and I'll call it a good riddance."

There was a murmur of talk among the young communists. Petroff shook off Stephen's hand and came forward, those shallow Tartar eyes of his fixed maliciously upon Elizabeth. As he advanced, she went back step by step until the wall stopped her, her eyes glassy, her hands palm outward as if to fend him off. When she reached the wall she braced herself against it. Her hands fell to her sides. She waited for what would come next.

Petroff came to within about a yard of her and said:

"You've been in a great hurry to change your name, haven't you?"

Stephen looked over his head and laughed.

"I was right then. Didn't I say so? It would be a good joke against me if I hadn't found it out for myself. She is really your Elizabeth Radin?"

Elizabeth held up her head and looked at Petroff. She could not look at Stephen.

She heard Petroff say, "Yes, she is Elizabeth Radin," and at once the room was full of loud buzzing voices. Irina talked, the young communists talked, Stephen shouted, and Petroff, coming quite near, said in a tone which somehow pierced the noise;

"What a fool you were to run away!"

The words echoed bitterly in the lost and arid place where Elizabeth's consciousness struggled with the approach of darkness. A fool . . . a fool who had climbed up a little way out of the pit, only to slide back again—and deeper. No, she had not climbed, she had been drawn up, and the hand that had drawn her up had thrust her down again—Stephen's hand. She shuddered from the thought that she had clung to it. It fell now on her shoulder with a heavy grip.

Stephen, still laughing, shook her a little.

At his touch Elizabeth screamed. It was the faintest of sounds, no more in reality than a sharply drawn breath of agony, but it rang in her own ears as a scream. It drowned Stephen's voice and Stephen's words. It was the last thing she heard, because in that moment the darkness fell.

Elizabeth opened her eyes because a bright light was shining on them. She shut them again quickly because the light hurt her. It continued to shine through her closed lids. After a moment she put up her hand to shield her eyes, and with that movement consciousness flowed back and she was aware of her body again. She was lying down . . . on a bed . . . her hands and feet were cold . . . the light was shining on her eyes. . . .

A shiver ran over her. She raised herself on her elbow and once more opened her eyes. She was lying on a narrow bed in a square, whitewashed room. There were more beds like the one she was lying on—three or four more. An unshaded electric light hung from the ceiling.

Elizabeth frowned, raised herself a little more, and looked about her. There were three other beds. On the edge of one of them a young woman sat looking at her. She had a foolish, flat face, rather light eyes, and hands with stubby fingers and bitten nails. There was a finger at her mouth most of the time. She looked over her shoulder and said:

"She's awake, Marfa."

Elizabeth sat up, and saw a little old woman peering at her.

"Where am I?"

The old woman went on peering. The young one said:

"Prison."

Elizabeth repeated the word as if saying it to herself:

"Prison——"

She sat on the edge of the bed and put her feet to the floor. She felt giddy when she moved. When her head was clear again she became conscious of some relief. If this was a prison, it was at least a clean and decent place. It was, she discovered, a woman's ward in the ordinary civil prison, and for this she felt thankful. The lot of the political prisoner was generally cast in fouler places.

Her two companions were serving sentences, one for selling illicit vodka—all intoxicants being a government monopoly—and the other for murder. It was the young woman, Anna, who was the murderess. She had got tired of looking after some aged relative and had strangled her. For the rest she seemed a stupid, amiable person, who could talk by the hour about nothing. The old woman never spoke at all. Her gray hair fell over her eyes in an unkempt tangle, and through the elf-locks she watched Elizabeth's every move with the suspicious air of an animal.

"He was a big man, that one who carried you in," said Anna presently; "a fine man, though I don't like red hair myself. They say you can never trust a red haired person."

Elizabeth winced. Stephen had carried her in. She had trusted him with all her heart. She winced now at the thought that he had touched her. Her sheepskin coat and cap were laid at the foot of the bed. Was it Stephen who had put them on her before he carried her through the cold streets? Or was it Petroff, who would not want her to die until she had given him the formula?

"He carried you as easily as if you were a baby," said Anna, "and took off your coat and cap and laid you down on the bed. There was a dark man with him—a commissar. I have seen him before. His name is Petroff. He took hold of your wrist and felt it, and said, 'Is she all right?' Then the big man said, 'So you don't want her to die, comrade?' And that Petroff, 'Not just yet.' 'O, you needn't be afraid—she won't die,' says the big man. Is he your lover?"

"I have no lover," said Elizabeth.

Anna bit a thumbnail which was already down to the quick.

Elizabeth sat and stared at the wall and thought how she had trusted Stephen. She had given him her trust and her friendship. She had been ready to give him her love—if he had wanted it. She wondered whether it would hurt more to think that he had not wanted it at all, or that he had wanted it lightly for the pleasure of a passing moment.

GASOLINE ALLEY—THE WOMAN IN BLACK

COME OVER HERE AND SIT DOWN SKEEZIX. I WANT TO ASK YOU SOME QUESTIONS.
I HAVEN'T DONE ANYTHING—HONEST!
WHAT SORT OF LOOKING WOMAN WAS THE ONE WHO QUIZZED YOU ON THE BRIDGE?
I COULDN'T GET A GOOD LOOK. IT WAS DARK.
HOW WAS SHE DRESSED?
ALL I KNOW IS SHE HAD ON A LONG BLACK CLOAK. WHY, UNCLE WALT?
I DON'T KNOW BUT IT MIGHT BE IMPORTANT. THE WOMAN IN BLACK! WOULD YOU KNOW HER IF YOU SAW HER?
NOT FROM HER FACE. BUT I'M SURE I WOULD FROM HER VOICE.
KING

late president, Rue Winterbotham Carpenter. It is a lovely thing and was greatly admired by the dozens of guests yesterday.

Renaissance Tea for Alexander Calder.

Before going to the Arts club tomorrow night many artistic socialites will be driving south to the University of Chicago, there to meet the young sculptor, Alexander Calder, for whom a tea will be given by the Renaissance society from 3 to 5:30 o'clock in Wieboldt commons. The society is opening an exhibition of Mr. Calder's "Mobiles" on Monday, to continue until Jan. 31.

The tea will give members of the society an opportunity for a private view of the exhibition as well as a chance to meet the sculptor, who is said by one who has met him in Paris and New York to "combine simplicity and subtlety in an extraordinary way."

Mr. Calder, who is a nephew of Henry and William James, went to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, but he always had a leaning toward sculptural structure, and even his wire sculptures have the quality of fine drawings. The wire sculptures are used in a circus which he is to give at the Walter S. Brewsters' supper party a week from tomorrow.

Assisting at the tea tomorrow will be Mrs. Martin Schutze, president; Mrs. William A. Nitze, vice president; Mrs. James A. Field, Mrs. Dallas B. Phemister, Mrs. Henry Gale, Mrs. John U. Nef, Mrs. Walter S. Brewster, Mrs. Mary Tilt Bartlett, Mrs. Arthur Bissell Jr., Mrs. Paul Hudson, Miss Katharine Dudley, Miss Alice Roullier, Mrs. Preston Vance, Mrs. Donald Snow, Mrs. George Bobrinsky, and Mrs. John B. Allen.

Ping-Pong Tourney at Dunham Woods

With the weather unsuitable for either horseback or sleigh riding, the members of the popular little Dunham Woods Riding club out at Wayne are turning their attention to indoor sports. In a spirit of keen rivalry a ping-pong tournament got under way at the club Thursday evening to continue through next Saturday night.

The second session will be held Thursday evening with such racquet stars as William S. Monroe, Nicholas Remisoff, the Arthur Farwells, the David McDougals, Miss Jane Dunham, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lindsay III., playing the tiny white balls. The competition will reach its climax before a large applauding gallery a week from tonight. Dinner will precede the tourney.

There is to be a gay dancing party at the club tonight with a number of Chicago and north shore folk motoring out to spend the week-end at the club. After a buffet supper in the clubhouse, dancing will get under way in the coach house. Then there will be the usual scrambled egg and sausage breakfast shortly after midnight. So that it will be formal but not too formal, black ties will be in order.

The Raymond Mitchells will entertain 20 guests, including the Bruce Thornes, Miss Virginia Ashcraft, Miss Jane Rowe, Malcolm Stevenson, the Winston Eltings, the John Doles, Miss Dunham, Mr. Remisoff, and the Lindsays. Three to Celebrate at Birthday Party.

There will be nothing but birthday congratulations used in greeting this evening in the drawing room of Mrs. Leverett Thompson's house in Lake Forest. Her daughter and son-in-law, Dr. and Mrs. Paul B. Magnuson, are giving a triple birthday party with Mrs. Magnuson, Mrs. Stuart Otis, and Lloyd Laflin as the birthday "children."

Ever since Laura Thompson [Mrs. Magnuson], Alice Carpenter [Mrs. Otis], and Mr. Laflin were small children they have been reserving Jan. 12 for a joint birthday celebration. Within a few minutes of each other they were all born the same day in Lake Forest and their parents all lived within a few doors of one another.

Besides the three families concerned there will be a few other intimate friends at the dinner party tomorrow evening. Mrs. Thompson is living at the Churchill this winter while the Magnusons are occupying her Lake Forest house. The rest of the year they live on their Pond Gate farm at Dundee.

Mr. and Mrs. James C. Hutchins are entertaining at a dinner and hocky party tomorrow night for Miss Caryl Ely, one of the most popular of the season's debutantes.

Cocktail Party for Sylvia Sidney.

Those whom Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Lane have invited for cocktails at their residence, 11 Scott street, this evening will have the pleasure of meeting Sylvia Sidney, the screen actress, for the party is being given for her.

Today and tomorrow the new Tower Town galleries on the lower floor of the Tower Town building at 820 North Tower court will have their formal opening with receptions in the late afternoon.

The Municipal Art league will have a preview of the exhibitions of Chicago artists today, and Mrs. Frank G. Logan and Mrs. H. McCleland Hess will pour tea at the reception.

Tomorrow Mrs. Helen Walton and Mrs. Harold Pynchon will preside at the tea tables.

Mrs. Thatcher Hoyt gave a luncheon yesterday at the Cordon for her house guest, Mrs. Grace Thompson Seton, who is here finishing a work she started in 1932, a collection of world women authors, for the Northwestern Deering library.

Bennett Alumnae Will Meet Tuesday.

According to rumor interesting plans are to be revealed Tuesday at the tea the alumnæ of the Bennett school are to have from 3 to 5 at the 900. Hostesses will include Mrs. Orton Elbert, Mrs. Samuel Carson Pirie, and Miss Katherine Healy.

"Appetizers—How to Make Them—When to Serve Them," a booklet containing directions for making foreign and American appetizers, with thirty recipes, is on sale at the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street and Tribune Tower, for 3 cents. By mail, 5 cents, stamps or coin. Address mail requests to Mary Meade, Chicago Tribune.

BY MARY MEADE.

If you're one of these provident meal-makers who has supplied her kitchen with a heat regulator for the range oven—just smile complacently and overlook this first subject of ours today. But if you have to do your own regulating, fiddling with the knobs or handles to keep the oven heat within bounds while the cake bakes, then here are a few tips which should help.

Recently tests were made with a number of different sorts of ovens to determine whether or not it really matters if the degree of heat happens to be 25 degrees higher than that stated in the recipe—whether this difference of 25 points is enough to give an unsatisfactory baking result. The question, we find, can't be answered by yes or no. Sometimes the 25 degree difference is relatively unimportant. At other times it makes all the difference between failure and success. The two points which really matter are which 25 degrees they are and what product it is that is being baked. For instance, certain cake recipes turn out equally well when baked at any temperature between 350 and 375 degrees F. But if these same cakes were started at 375 degrees and the heat then allowed to rise to 400, they would be pretty sad looking affairs.

The same thing seems to be true of pie baking. Some homemakers prefer to bake their pies at 425 degrees F. Others choose 450 degrees. But if these last let the heat sail up to 475 degrees I fear they will find a burned, or at least an overcooked and bitter crust.

The cooking of a whole meal in the oven is something else again. If we accidentally let the heat rise 25 degrees above the approved point we may discover that there has been an unnecessary amount of evaporation, drying the foods and discoloring the vegetables.

In canning, an excess of 25 degrees is quite apt to injure the rubbers, causing them to lose their ability to stretch. This may result in breakage and the entrance of air and harmful bacteria into the food.

In short, these tests prove quite conclusively that whenever possible it is a bright move to have oven regulators in the kitchen. We have quite enough chances for error with our differing methods of cooking, different materials in pans, and various grades and brands of ingredients without running the added risk of having unexpected ups and downs in oven temperature.

Just today we ran across another tempting bit of news. Cooks no longer have to yank open cupboard doors and climb up on stools to locate the waxed paper, the parchment paper, or the paper towels. We've just met a kitchen rack which hangs itself up neatly beside the sink or the kitchen door and is always ready to supply you with four different kinds of household paper. One roll is of the new waterproof garbage paper, grand stuff for transporting the leavings from the sink to the furnace or garbage can. Next roll down is of heavy waxed paper for pan linings, food wrappings, and a hundred other uses. The third roll is of parchment paper, good for use in the refrigerator—even used to cook in. The bottom roll supplies absorbent paper toweling. All the papers tear off neatly against special cutter edges.

Something new in snowflakes! We discovered it on a friend's dainty glasses of pudding the other day—and found that the pleasant crystallized flakes were nothing more nor less than rice grains! All one needs is one cup of cooked rice—let the grains be whole, dry, and cold before you use them—one-half cup of water, and one cup of sugar. Boil the sugar and water until the sirup spins a thread. Drop in the separated grains of cooked rice and stir with a fork until the rice is thoroughly coated. Drain it on a paper. Use over puddings or ice cream.

Inner Conflicts Often Cause of Child's Stealing

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

We were saying yesterday that the boy or girl who is brought before the judge of a Juvenile court has not had a normal home life, with the comforts and the advantages of training that that implies. This is quite true—yet there are exceptions. At least they look like exceptions on the surface.

Take the boy of highly intelligent parents, who was of good mentality himself and who attended an excellent private school. He was known at school not to be truthful, and also known to go to the 5 and 10 cent stores and help himself from the counters. Apparently he had every advantage.

What was wrong? This case never came before any authority or clinician. But those who were interested observers thought the boy's actions were due to emotional conflict, brought about by the fact that his mother had married a second time, a man about whom she was quite "mad," making the boy feel quite outside her life. The cure would have been quite simple. Whether it was ever achieved I do not know.

But such situations are not rare. Unhappiness, estrangement, something wrong about that vital relationship between parent and child, and curiously devious misbehavior often results. To steal may be a compensation—or a sort of revenge—or both.

Often the consulting psychologist or the child guidance clinic can show parents the way, and if the boy or girl is old enough, advise him or her directly—that if, if the parent is completely at a loss.

Of course stealing arises from other motives—envy, a longing for something the family cannot provide, or the desire of a child to impress his companions, or to earn popularity.

Exciting Knits Are Placed on Lists of Buys

Shoppers Keep Fashion Eye on Tweeds, Too.

BY RHEA SEEGER.

Clothes that will give you a "lift" these days are going fast. Everybody seems to be hunting either a cheerful color, new prints, or some exciting knits and tweeds.

The knits and tweeds have the best of the week-end buys. There's a coral red knit for dinner wear [in chilly baronial dining rooms, maybe] that has long slit sleeves, a high neckline and a long skirt. The belt has a decorative glittering square buckle and the outfit certainly looks festive.

Snowflake knits are exquisitely lovely in white and colors; soft, puffy looking yarn just like the name. The two piece numbers have brown nut shaped buttons down the front slit of the blouse, the sleeves are short and the skirt slim and straight. A bright canary yellow knit has a fringed handkerchief neckline and either long or short sleeves.

Aquamarine blue is powerfully effective on redheads and silver gilt blondes. You'll find two and one piece knits of this color with unusual frills over the chest and silver or gold metal clips and matching belt buckles.

There are kelly green knits in smooth two piece combines with short blouse tops with unusual necklines. The patterns are different and effective and the streamlines keep you thin and smart looking.

Southbound vacationists will like the stunning knit coats in swagger style. Lovely light blue models made with long, loose, rather wide sleeves, deep pockets and smart collar lines are just what you need as costume contrast for white and pastel tinted dresses.

Old gold as a color deserves a paragraph by itself . . . some of the best looking midseason stuff comes in this warm, flattering shade. Thin wools, soft blurred checks, diagonals, and plain wool crêpe as well as silks fashion some of the winners. Also grand collections of gold knitted cloths in this shade are worthy of all the excitement they are causing!

WASHINGTON SOCIETY

Washington, D. C., Jan. 11.—[Special.]—Mrs. Roosevelt left this morning for New York to be officially lost until she returns here Tuesday night or Wednesday morning. Both she and the President have been suffering from colds for some days and she disappeared to try to cure hers. The President is much better.

Deodorant Is Necessary in Winter Hygiene

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

"Women forget summer is not the only time for perspiration remedies," said a saleswoman recently on a rush sales day. "If anything there's more winter need for them. Those woollen things catch and hold odors as no summer materials do. The latter, at least, have the advantage of being tubbed. Cleaning often will not completely remove the perspiration odor, once it has penetrated the woollen frock."

"At times," the saleswoman continued, "in these small fitting booths that have to be kept well heated it's almost impossible to stand it."

It's true those woollens and sweater and jersey things have to be provided against any possibility of contamination. It can only be done by the use of some good deodorant or perspiration remedy. These are obtainable now in excellent products for little money compared to the comfortable knowledge that one cannot possibly offend saleslomen, co-workers of oneself.

Another item in this connection that bears stressing is, as this same salesperson pointed out, that for some peculiar reason women who bathe perhaps several times a day in summertime, are not so conscientious in this matter in the cold months. Days elapse without a bath. Indeed, this same salesperson, in her general disgust reported the conversation between a customer and her friend. They compared notes on dates of their last bath. In each case, the ablution was three days ago.

Their respective house and apartment were too cold. "Nize peoples?" the saleslady added.

The fastidious woman never lets down on this phase of her character and reputation. She's just as particular in winter about her baths, her deodorant application and her underwear and stocking freshness because she knows the hazards of overheated rooms and contaminated clothing to suffering nostrils. In fact, our latter day fastidious one has become so keen scented herself that she wouldn't dream of going out without being sure she would pass the most scrupulous test.

Fan Patterns in Favor with Quilt Makers

Grandma's Fan.

By NANCY CABOT.

If there is anything more popular in quiltdom than fan patterns, it is more fan patterns. "Grandma's Fan" is one of the oldest quilt blocks which top the list of favorites. It was first made in 1870. The fans are appliqued in each corner of a plain block and set together with a three inch band of plain color. Our modern color combinations and print materials far surpass those utilized by our great-grandmothers, so it is our own fault if we cannot create a coverlet of equal, if not greater, beauty to pass on to posterity than did even they.

Patterns of this quilt design are 5 cents, stamps or coin. Address Nancy Cabot, Chicago Tribune, or call at one of the Tribune Public Service offices, One South Dearborn street and Tribune Tower.

They Intend to Try Marriage on $46 per Week

BY DORIS BLAKE.

"I don't suppose," volunteers "Bride-to-be," "that two people in love will listen to any one's advice once they've decided to marry, which my beloved and I have decided to do. However, there's no harm in presenting our case, now, is there?

"I am making $21 a week, while my young man is making $25. There is the bright chance of a two or three dollars a week raise shortly. Now, what do you think of that as a working sum for two in marriage?

"We are promised quite a bit in the way of wedding gifts, such as furniture and the like. We want to have $100 in the bank before we start on our adventure. Adventure it certainly is, but we're nothing if not adventurous. We are both, by our own and other people's opinion, pretty darned sensible. Neither of us is afraid of work.

"We promise to help one another in anything in the housework; everything that goes with the adventure. He is ambitious and promises to be as kind and considerate of me as I know I will be of him.

"I have heard so much arguing against women working. So many of my relatives are against it.

"What do you think of our chances?"

Good—very good, "Bride-to-be." You're starting in with no illusions about money, or about making a soft bed for yourself in marriage. Your combined salaries, while not munificent, represent more than the income of thousands and thousands of married pairs today.

If you hold to that coöperative spirit, you two, your adventure will be a merry one. If the young man's ambitions mature, as you expect, you can drop into the wholetime home making rôle gracefully and before it is too late get your family started. That's the important reservation to make when necessity impels the two-wage income in the beginning.

CONQUERING CONTRACT

By P. HAL SIMS

CONCLUDING OBSERVATIONS ON THE THREE BID AND ITS USES.

In the last few articles dealing with the advanced treatment of the king-showing feature, I assumed in the examples given that the responder had no aces, so that his first response was three no trumps, permitting a king probe at the four level. Should he have an ace to show and so get the bidding a round higher right away, the same principles apply. The responsibility is on the opening bidder; he must not probe at too high a level, so that the hand will reach an unsafe contract in case responder denies the card called for. For instance, if the bidding has been three hearts, four diamonds by you, five clubs. Now opener is telling you that the hand is safe at five hearts—either because your diamond ace eliminates a loser from his hand or because he had only two losers to start with. Now:

First. If you bid five spades you show both the called-for king of clubs and also the king of spades. He can still call for the king of diamonds if he cares to without driving you beyond six hearts, which is now known to be safe as responder has been told that he eliminates two losers, one by each response he has made.

Second. If you bid five diamonds you deny the king of clubs and still permit him to probe for the king of spades if the king of diamonds which you now show can substitute for the called-for king of clubs as the eliminator of a loser.

Third. If you bid six clubs you show the called-for king of clubs in addition to the ace of that suit already shown. You have now eliminated two losers. You have denied the possession of the king of spades, as with both black kings your bid would be five spades. If the king of diamonds will give him a grand slam he can still probe for it by bidding six diamonds; your denial will be six hearts, a bid which is safe because you have eliminated two losers with your two high clubs. The ace permitted him to drive the bidding to the five level in asking about the king. The affirmative reply about the king permits the bidding to reach six. Definitly, neither of your high clubs constitutes a duplication. Opener must now know for sure whether he can make six or seven. A first round ruff is the only way a grand slam need fear defeat if he gets the information which permits him to bid it—or else an unexpected loser in trumps against 10 x x x x. These are about the only risks—slight enough, goodness knows—which remain to give the opponents a chance of a break after an opening Sims three bid. THE FACT THAT YOU HAVE SHOWN AN ACE has no effect on your subsequent showing or denial of the king of that same suit; proceed just as if the ace were a "forgotten card." The factor involved by the bidding being thus a round higher need not cause any trouble, as explained above.

If Opener Probes for a Higher King Before a Lower One.

In the examples we have used I have assumed that opener always probed for the lowest ranking king which he can use. Generally he will do so because, as we have seen, this makes the subsequent development far easier to handle by both partners. However, on rare occasions he may probe first for a higher ranking king and then for a lower one. If so, answer his questions directly. Do not assume that he has made a slip of mind or tongue. Trust him to have a good reason and to be able to take care of all resulting bids you may be compelled to make at whatever level may be necessary, whether in affirmation or in denial of the kings he calls for.

He is inverting the usual procedure because he can probe for the higher king at a lower level; only if you supply it can he afford to probe for the lower king. This will happen only if you have shown an ace which is useless to him. For instance,

Sp. A K Q J x x x x — Di. —
Hts. A x x — Cl. A x

Three spades, four diamonds. The hand is still not safe beyond four spades; so he must probe in hearts because if you lack that king you can still sign off safely at four spades. If you have it, it removes two losers as it also serves to bring your ace of diamonds into play, and over your five hearts he can now afford to probe for the grand slam by bidding six clubs, permitting your sign-off at six spades if there is still a loser. Had he held A Q x in hearts, once you show that king he bids seven spades, as it removes three losers. Had he held A Q x and A Q, he could afford to probe for clubs first and locate both kings, because any opening lead except a trump will make the hand safe at five spades. A good risk, I think.

LOUIS STOPS BIRKIE IN 10TH; LEO RODAK WINS

Games Tonight

Illinois at Ohio State.
Michigan at Minnesota.
Iowa at Northwestern.
Chicago at Purdue.
Wisconsin at Indiana.

BY WILFRID SMITH.

This may be Iowa's big basketball year, the best since 1926 when the Hawkeyes tied with three other quintets for the conference championship. But if it is, Coach Rollie Williams and his boys probably will look back to tonight's battle with Northwestern as the deciding factor in the successful campaign.

In other words, by defeating Northwestern tonight Iowa will be in a strategic position with three victories. Iowa's rivals, still considered to be Illinois, Purdue, and Northwestern, will be one or more steps behind in the parade, while Indiana, even if it beats Wisconsin tonight, which would give the Hoosiers two victories, will have the task of trying to whip last year's first division teams while Iowa is meeting foes of lesser skill.

This is the setting for tonight's battle at Patten gymnasium which should attract a capacity crowd not only because it is the best attraction on the five game conference schedule but also because the fate of Northwestern's quintet will be decided.

Ponder Defeat at Madison.

Northwestern adherents still are wondering what happened to the Wildcats Monday night at Madison when Wisconsin whipped them, 16 to 9, and limited the heretofore undefeated Wildcats to three field goals, only one of which was scored by Lyle Fisher, who in six practice contests had averaged 17 points a game.

A fairly satisfactory explanation is that Northwestern doesn't have a well balanced scoring combination. Fisher and Jess McAnally carry the burden with slight help from Duke Vance, Guy Mercer, and Al Kawal. This simplifies the defense for the opposition which must contend primarily with only two men.

Then, too, Northwestern permitted Wisconsin to set the tempo of play. The Badgers played a slow, deliberate game, refusing to attempt to score unless the percentage of successful shooting was with them. Northwestern, which performs best at high speed, fell in with this plan and was beaten because the Badgers protected a slight lead in the second half and used it as a lever to force the play.

Iowa Prefers Fast Play.

Tonight's play should be fast. Iowa likes that style because of the speed of Sid Rosenthal, forward from Marshall High school, Chicago; John Grim, John Barko, and Albert Bobby. These men are accurate at the basket, and since two of them, Grim and Rosenthal are 5 feet 9 inches and 5 feet 7 inches tall, respectively, the keyword for attack is speed. Play centers around a pair of pivot men, Ivan Blackmer, 6 feet 4 inches, and Matt Walsh, 6 feet 6 inches, a 220 pound sophomore from Council Bluffs, Ia.

Glen Tangeman, another small forward, and Ted Osmaloski, husky substitute guard, complete the list of the leading Iowa players.

Iowa defeated Ohio State, 32 to 21, and Chicago, 39 to 29, to gain first place in the conference standings. Both games were played at Iowa City.

Center Jump May Decide It.

Regardless of the outcome, tonight's game should be fairly close, with Northwestern having a general height advantage, although McAnally may not get the ball at the center circle. If he does, Northwestern, barring almost total collapse on attack, should win.

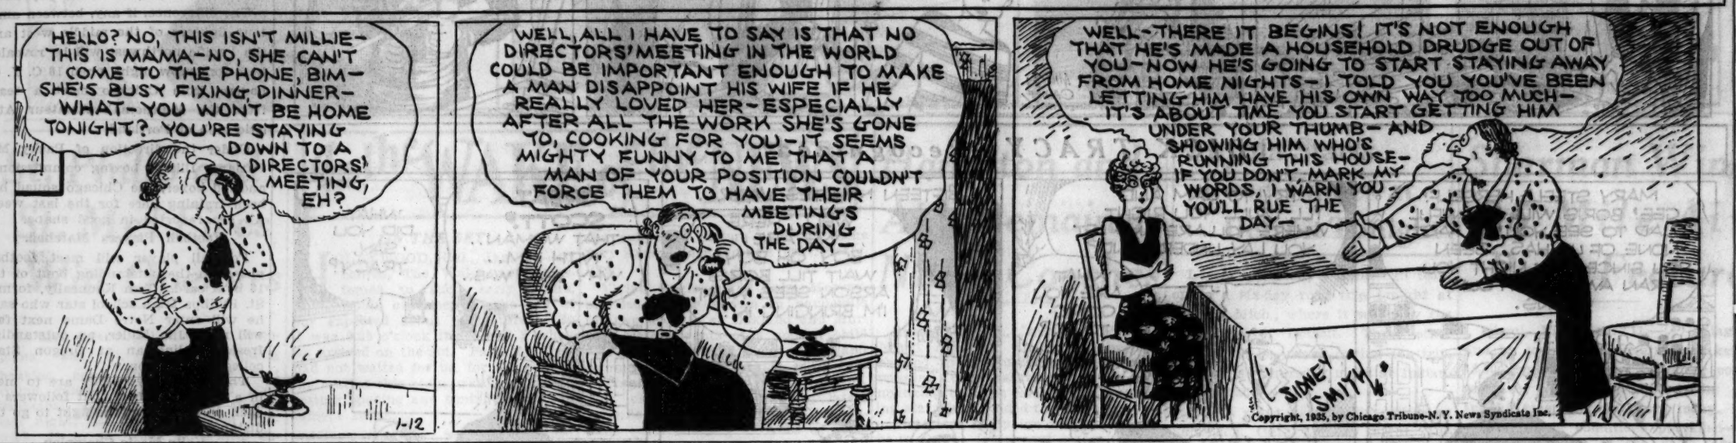
Wisconsin's invasion of Indiana's court would rate as equally important as the Northwestern-Iowa game except that if Indiana wins the Hoosiers still are confronted with an almost impossible task because of the nature of their schedule. It is very important for Wisconsin to win, since the Badgers already have lost one game. Wisconsin was defeated by Purdue, 19 to 18, before whipping Northwestern. It remains to be seen if Wisconsin's tight defense can check Indiana's attack, which scored a 32 to 28 victory over Illinois at Champaign, an achievement Purdue's veterans could not match.

Purdue Likely to Beat Chicago.

Chicago can have slight hope for a victory tonight over Purdue at Lafayette. Superior speed and the exceptional scoring ability of Norm Cottom and Ed Shaver should give the Boilermakers a second victory. Illinois is expected to defeat Ohio State, provided Frank Froschauer and Bob Riegel are in form. Riegel leads the individual conference scoring with 22 points, while Froschauer is in fourth place with 15 points.

Minnesota opens its conference campaign tonight against Michigan at Minneapolis. Michigan lost to Ohio State Monday night, 33 to 30, in the only overtime game of the conference season. The Wolverines have been erratic in floor play, but probably possess more offensive strength than the Gophers, whose most notable victory of the season, a decision over Notre Dame, was made possible by 16 free throws rather than by a floor attack, which produced only seven field goals.

THE GUMPS—DINNER AT EIGHT



HELLO? NO, THIS ISN'T MILLIE—THIS IS MAMA—NO, SHE CAN'T COME TO THE PHONE, BIM—SHE'S BUSY FIXING DINNER—WHAT—YOU WON'T BE HOME TONIGHT? YOU'RE STAYING DOWN TO A DIRECTORS' MEETING, EH?
WELL, ALL I HAVE TO SAY IS THAT NO DIRECTORS' MEETING IN THE WORLD COULD BE IMPORTANT ENOUGH TO MAKE A MAN DISAPPOINT HIS WIFE IF HE REALLY LOVED HER—ESPECIALLY AFTER ALL THE WORK SHE'S GONE TO, COOKING FOR YOU—IT SEEMS MIGHTY FUNNY TO ME THAT A MAN OF YOUR POSITION COULDN'T FORCE THEM TO HAVE THEIR MEETINGS DURING THE DAY—
WELL—THERE IT BEGINS! IT'S NOT ENOUGH THAT HE'S MADE A HOUSEHOLD DRUDGE OUT OF YOU—NOW HE'S GOING TO START STAYING AWAY FROM HOME NIGHTS—I TOLD YOU YOU'VE BEEN LETTING HIM HAVE HIS OWN WAY TOO MUCH—IT'S ABOUT TIME YOU START GETTING HIM UNDER YOUR THUMB—AND SHOWING HIM WHO'S RUNNING THIS HOUSE—IF YOU DON'T MARK MY WORDS, I WARN YOU—YOU'LL RUE THE DAY—

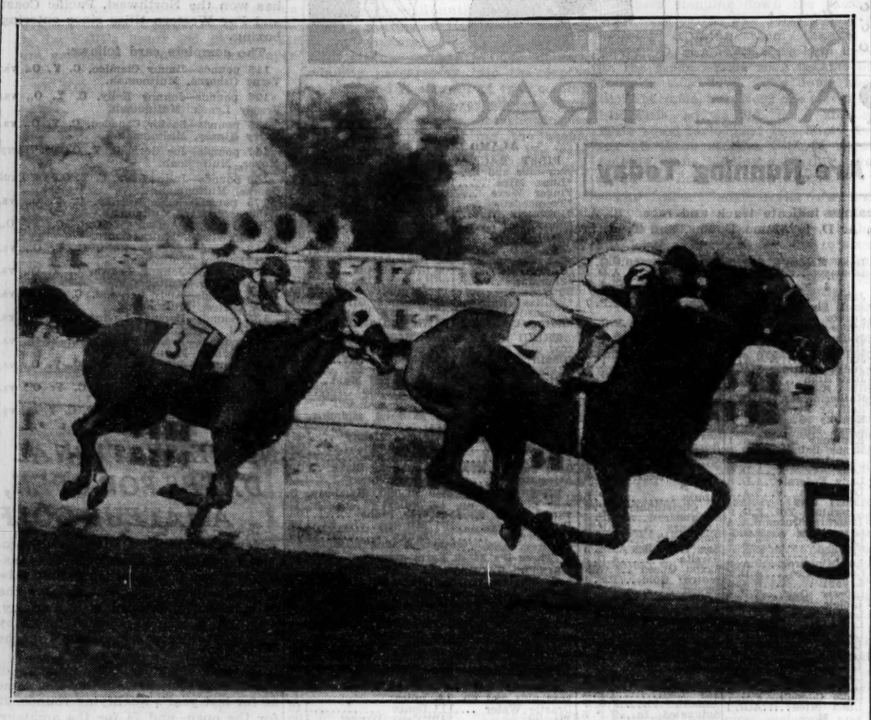
1934 CHAMPION STILL BRINGS THEM HOME FIRST



Maurice Peters celebrates his first day as a fullfledged jocky by booting Sun Archer to victory yesterday in the feature race at Santa Anita, Arcadia, Cal. Until yesterday Peters, 1934 jocky champion, was an apprentice rider. Gold Step is second. [Associated Press Wirephoto.]

6,200 Will See Butler Tonight at Notre Dame

Notre Dame, Ind., Jan. 11.—[Special.]—A powerful Butler basketball team will provide the opposition for Notre Dame here tomorrow night before what promises to be a sell-out crowd of 6,200. Butler will go into the game with six victories and three defeats.

Purdue and Northwestern, favorites for Big Ten championship honors, and Pittsburgh, annually one of the strongest teams, administered the defeats. Butler held the powerful Purdue team to a three point victory, 34 to 31. Northwestern, which has beaten Notre Dame this year, won, 31 to 26. Pittsburgh's margin was 42 to 24.

Butler has defeated Illinois and Chicago of the Big Ten by 15 and 6 points, respectively, and also has beaten Earlham, Indiana Central, Franklin, and Wabash.

The game should furnish one of the greatest duels of the season when Marty Peters, leading Irish scorer, and Gene Demmary, 6 foot 7 inch Bulldog center, pair off in the center circle. Demmary has averaged nine points a game, and Peters ten points.

FRED PERRY AND CRAWFORD MEET FOR NET CROWN

Perry, whose 1934 world-wide campaign netted him the British, American, and Australian titles, gained the final round of the Australian tourney today by defeating Vivian McGrath, the Aussie Davis cup player, in straight set, 6-2, 6-3, 6-1. The Briton apparently has become completely divorced from the slump that has lasted several weeks.

Perry's opponent in the final will be his arch-British empire rival, Jack Crawford, who wore the crown three years until Perry wrested it from him last winter. Crawford defeated his Davis cup teammate, Adrian Quist, in the other semi-final today.

Perry and George Patrick Hughes, his touring English partner, lost the doubles crown today to Crawford and McGrath, 6-4, 8-6, 6-2.

Twenty Grand Again Held Out of Santa Anita Race

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 11.—(AP)—The Greentree stable today failed to enter Twenty Grand for the Hollywood handicap at a mile tomorrow because of threatening weather. It was the fourth time Twenty Grand's coming out race has been postponed.

REAL JOCKY NOW

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 11.—(AP)—The apprenticeship of little Maurice Peters, 1934 national champion jocky, came to an end today as he rode Sun Archer to victory in the feature race at Santa Anita park.

The 5 year old gelding, owned by Bert Barroni, won by a length in the La Jolla handicap of 6 furlongs in 1 minute 13 1-5 seconds over a slow track.

Sun Archer worked his way up from last at the start, to win with a great stretch run after trailing Gold Step by a length and a half at the turn. Gold Step was second and Risky Miss third. The winner paid $11.60, $5.20 and $3.20.

It was a year ago at New Orleans that Peters rode his first winner in the start of his climb to the championship, but hereafter he will not be benefited by the five pound apprentice allowance.

Vines, Tilden Again Defeat Lott, Stoefen

Washington, D. C., Jan. 11.—(AP)—The doubles combination of William T. Tilden and Ellsworth Vines, for the third straight night, defeated George M. Lott and Lester Stoefen, former amateur world champions, 9-7, 7-5, in an abbreviated match tonight.

Before a crowd of 2,500 that pressed close to the side and base lines of the Catholic university gymnasium here, Vines put on a brilliant exhibition of driving, smashing, and volleying to lead the veteran professional pair to a comparatively easy victory.

Lott Beats Tilden, 6-3, 6-4.

Earlier, Lott took the measure of Tilden, 6-3, 6-4, in a singles match in which the crowd bothered both, but which saw Lott the less temperamental and more steady.

In the doubles match, Stoefen took the spotlight in the first set, making almost impossible returns in midcourt and at the net to put the recent amateurs ahead. Lott's service crumbled, however, and Tilden and Vines pressed their opponents into errors that cost them the set.

Errors Contribute to Loss.

Tilden's cannonball service was put in the shade by the hard service smashes of Stoefen and Vines in the second sets. The two put on an exhibition of power driving throughout the set, with each frequently handcuffing the other. Errors by Stoefen and Lott, however, again cost them the set.

In the concluding singles match, Vines made it two straight over Stoefen, 7-5, 6-1.

Solem Will Be at N. U. Game, but Not to Talk Job

Iowa City, Ia., Jan. 11—[Special.]—Ossie Solem, University of Iowa football coach and athletic director, denied emphatically today that he would confer with Tug Wilson regarding the Northwestern football coaching position when he reaches Evanston tomorrow to watch Iowa's basketball team play the Wildcats.

"I am perfectly satisfied at Iowa and intend to remain here. I would not consider any coaching proposition at Northwestern," Solem asserted.

He added that he would spend part of tomorrow at South Bend, Ind., where he expects to negotiate for a football game between Iowa and Notre Dame.

SILVER SKATES ON TOMORROW; COLD FORECAST

All Races Will Be Held on One Day.

With a forecast of freezing temperatures for the next 24 hours, an effort will be made to hold the Silver Skates Derbies at Waveland avenue rink tomorrow. This means that all preliminaries, as well as finals, will be held on the one afternoon. This afternoon's preliminaries will be advanced to tomorrow.

Definite announcement will be made in the sport pages of THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE. If the Derbies are postponed then, they will be scheduled for next Saturday and Sunday.

With freezing weather, Harry O'Hara of the Chicago parks system, believes that it may be possible to flood the Waveland avenue rink and prepare a suitable skating surface.

Skaters, Report Early!

In event the Silver Skates Derbies are held tomorrow, the first preliminary race in the boys' midget class will start at 12 o'clock. The order of races by divisions will be: Boys' midget, boys' juvenile, boys' junior, boys' intermediate, men's senior, girls' junior, and girls' senior.

The championship races will be skated approximately in the same order.

Racing numbers will be passed out from 9 a. m. until noon tomorrow at the Waveland avenue field house if the program is held as now planned. Because of the number of contestants, more than 3,300, skaters are urged to report early.

OPEN OLYMPIC TRIALS

Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 11.—(AP)—The Powderhorn park rink will be the testing ground tomorrow and Sunday for 38 of the United States' best ice skaters, aspiring to places on the team to represent this country in the Olympics at Berlin next year.

Starting at 1:30 p. m. tomorrow, the 500 and 1,500 meter races will be run off in the European style, which will be used at Berlin. No more than two men will be on the ice at the same time, with the winners to be determined according to time.

Sunday the 5,000 meter trials will be held, while on Saturday, Jan. 19, the final event, the 10,000 meter race, will be run.

Bialas, Potts Work Out.

Among those engaging in preliminary warmups were Val Bialas and Allan Potts of the 1932 United States Olympic speed skating team, who head a delegation of four New Yorkers here.

Whereas in the 1932 Olympics 12 men were on the team that represented the United States, only four will be selected for the 1916 entry, the winner of each event to win a place. Two alternates also will be named, the reduction in team personnel being occasioned by lack of funds, race officials stated.

All of the 38 skaters had reported to officials today, six of them being from Chicago, six from Detroit, four from New York, five from Milwaukee, three from St. Louis, two from Cleveland, one from Los Angeles, and four each from Minneapolis and St. Paul.

OFF FOR OLYMPIC TRIALS

A delegation of skating officials including Frank M. Kalteux, James McWhirter, Don Strathern, Edward Kersten, Carl Carstensen, Charles I. Johnson, and Peter Miller left yesterday afternoon for Minneapolis to officiate at the Olympic trials which will be held there today and tomorrow.

The Chicago contingent will make arrangements to bring the winner of the United States Olympic tryouts to Chicago to perform in several events in this section. The meet will begin this morning with the 500 meter event. The 5,000 meter race will be held tomorrow. Only the winners of each event will earn places on the Olympic team which next year will take part in the world races in Germany.

Hawks Tune Up for Boston Against Toronto Tonight

BY EDWARD BURNS.

The badly bruised world champion Blackhawks tonight in Toronto will play the league leading Maple Leafs, who have licked them in two meetings this year. It will be a sort of warm-up for the Hawks in preparation for their battle with the Boston Bruins at Chicago Stadium tomorrow night.

In tonight's affair the Hawks have a chance to resume the lead of the American division, a distinction which they surrendered to the Bostonians Thursday night while absorbing a 4 to 0 plastering at the hands of the Montreal Maroons as the Bruins were beating the St. Louis Eagles, 2 to 1.

It's for the Lead.

Win or lose tonight at Toronto, the Hawks tomorrow night will be playing for the division lead. If the champs win they will take the Stadium ice tomorrow night one point ahead of their adversaries of the evening. If they don't win, the Bruins, who will be idle here in Chicago tonight, will start Sunday night's game one point in the division lead.

Since a victory pays two points, the Hawks-Bruins' meeting qualifies as one of those crucial games. It's rather intricate, of course, to those who forget to figure that in hocky standings a loss doesn't count against a team beyond depriving it of a chance to add points to its record. There is no such thing as subtraction in hocky, one is reminded as one goes about the business of building up tomorrow's game as a very vital enterprise.

Abel Is Due Back.

The Hawks librarian has just fetched to THE TRIBUNE office a big scrapbook and other data revealing the prowess of the great Eddie Shore, who is a very tough hombre most places, but who generally cools off here on the rough stuff and concentrates on purely skilled hocky. It would be easy to write from two to six columns out of Shore's scrapbooks, but it will not be done, and here is the reason:

Tomorrow night while Shore is doing his stuff, there will be another famous and popular defense man performing for the first time this season. Taffy Abel will be back, and whether he's reached the pink or not, the return of Taffy is something for good Hawk bugs to cheer about.

Clem Loughlin, manager of the Hawks, hasn't formally announced the return of Abel, but latest bulletins from the behemoth's Turkish bath attendant indicate the big boy is ready and determined to glide out there Sunday night.

Leafs Slump a Bit.

The Leafs haven't been quite so hot since they whipped the Hawks the last time, but of course they still rate as one of the greatest hocky teams in the history of the sport. Even with a slight slump the Leafs have dropped only five games, but Detroit, the only team to beat them twice, has been beaten two out of three by the Hawks this season, causing some hope to bloom in so far as tonight's activities are concerned.

P. WANER AND VAUGHAN WILL NOT BE TRADED

Informed that Pie Traynor, Pirate manager, conferred with Branch Rickey, vice president of the St. Louis Cardinals, today, and that the Pirates might get a seasoned catcher in a deal involving Waner and Vaughan, Benswanger said:

"It is the first I had learned about Traynor's appearance in St. Louis and I did not know he had any intention of seeing Rickey. I have not heard a word from him since he left this city. One thing I will say, however, and that is, we will not trade either Vaughan or Paul Waner."

GERMAN QUITS AFTER GOING DOWN IN 7TH

Fourteen in Row for Ex-Golden Glover.

Two former Chicago Golden Gloves champions scored ring victories in widely separated cities last night. At Pittsburgh, Joe Louis stopped Hans Birkie in the tenth round, and at Los Angeles, Leo Rodak, winner of Golden Gloves titles in three divisions in as many years, defeated George Hansford in ten rounds. Harry Dublinsky, Chicago lightweight, lost a decision to Lou Ambers at New York.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Jan. 11.—[Special.]—Joe Louis, Chicago's 1934 Golden Gloves 175 pound champion, scored his fourteenth consecutive victory tonight when Hans Birkie, a rugged German mauler, quit standing up after 1 minute and 47 seconds of the tenth round of a fight which, up to the last round, was as one sided as it possibly could be without being stopped.

Louis, with his recent reputation attracting a crowd of 5,500 persons who paid $11,000, won all the way, although he failed to knock out his stolid foe. After being held even in the first round while he felt his way around Louis turned superb boxer against the slow Birkie and literally punched the German full of holes.

Drops Birkie Once.

Only once did Birkie go down, in the seventh round, and although badly beaten and entitled to a short respite, the German was up without a count.

But systematic punching finally collected its toll. As the crowd bellowed for action Louis opened the final round like the fighter he has proved to be since he embarked on his unbeaten professional career. Rushing out to face the disfigured Birkie, who had one eye closed and the other cut, Louis opened a two handed fusillade which soon had Birkie reeling. But he would not go down.

Louis finally forced him into a neutral corner and continued the unmerciful and workmanlike pommelling. Then, with the end near, Birkie threw down both hands, looked appealingly to the referee, and asked to be excused.

He Tends to Business.

Louis was a cold blooded, mechanical boxer, never making a false move and weaving in and out from Birkie's only weapon, a looping left hook. Once one of these caught the colored lad and brought out a mouse under his eye. Other than that Louis hardly broke a sweat.

It was an exciting climax to a bout that was drab until Louis chose to open up. Then the colored lad added punching power to a masterful boxing exhibition and sent the fans home convinced that the Golden Gloves product is a genuine menace in the heavyweight division.

RODAK WINS EASILY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 11.—Leo Rodak of Chicago, three times Golden Gloves champion, pounded out a clean cut ten round decision over George Hansford, Los Angeles featherweight, tonight at the Hollywood Legion stadium. A capacity crowd of 4,500 went home satisfied as Referee Jack Kennedy raised Rodak's hand at the finish. Both battlers weighed 129 pounds.

It was Rodak's 22d straight professional victory.

There were no knockdowns. Rodak won six rounds, Hansford three, and one was even. Rodak, counter punching cleverly, won three out of the first five rounds.

In the fifth he took the aggressive, piling up a big lead on points, although he couldn't hurt his opponent.

LOU AMBERS WINS

New York, Jan. 11. — (AP) — Lou Ambers stepped into the Garden ring for the first time in his life tonight and won a ten round decision over Harry Dublinsky, Chicago, to justify the New York state athletic commission's rating of him as the foremost lightweight challenger.

It was as rough a spot as a youngster could pick for himself, but the kid from Herkimer, N. Y., named by the New York commission above Tony Canzoneri, Frankie Klick, and the rest as the warrior best fitted to challenge Barney Ross, came through splendidly.

KNOX ALUMNI EAT, JEST ABOUT THEIR BEATINGS

New York, Jan. 11.—(AP)—The weight of 27 successive football defeats rested lightly upon the sons and daughters of old Siwash tonight as more than 100 of them gathered for the annual college dinner of the Knox Club of New York.

The subject of this string of defeats, which is close to an all-time record in football, was touched upon frequently but lightly by the speakers and the Knox alumni, who found it more interesting to learn that their 100 year old college this year had attracted the third largest freshman class in its history.

ROSS FLIES TO MIAMI FOR KLICK FIGHT JAN. 24

Baer Brothers to Appear on Same Card.

Barney Ross left by airplane yesterday for Miami, Fla., to begin preparations for a twelve round defense of his junior welterweight championship Jan. 24 against Frank Klick of San Francisco, Cal. He was accompanied by his managers, Sam Pian and Art Winch. Ross was held to a ten round draw by Klick at San Francisco March 5.

This factor, in addition to a strong supporting card which will include bouts involving Champion Max Baer and his heavyweight brother, Buddy Baer, and Tony Shucco, and Joe Knight, light heavyweight rivals, is expected to attract a gross gate of $60,000. Capacity of the arena is 17,000 and a sellout would account for $80,000.

Joe Foley, who has an option on Ross' services for his next encounter with the lightweight title at stake, intends to go to Miami Jan. 22. In event Klick whips Ross or loses a disputed decision Foley plans to present a lightweight championship bout between the two at Chicago Stadium or the International amphitheater, probably in April. The new amphitheater will seat 15,000, Foley said.

Frank Battaglia, scheduled to entrain today, will not leave until tomorrow after a drill at Trafton's gymnasium for a ten round match with Lou Brouillard next Thursday at Pittsburgh, Pa. . . . Chuck Heffner, Denver, Colo., middleweight, who has not fought here since his bout with Johnny Baima three years ago, has returned for matches. . . . Chuck whipped Emilio Martinez at Denver a few weeks ago for the Rocky mountain title.

Johnny Behr, Illinois Athletic club athletic director, yesterday announced the prizes which will be awarded boxers who compete in the annual I. A. C. amateur boxing tournament at the club gymnasium on Jan. 29 and 30. Each of the eight winners will receive a gold plated boxing glove, the runner-up will be awarded a silver glove, losers in the semi-finals will get bronze gloves and the club scoring the most points is to receive a team trophy.

The show scheduled at Arcadia Gardens next Wednesday has been set back to Jan. 30. . . . Miss Betty Brown is pinchhitting for Miss Gertrude Lembert as the Stadium switchboard operator pending the latter's recovery from an attack of pleurisy. . . . The next card at Detroit Olympia has been postponed from Feb. 1 to Feb. 8.

LANE TECH RUNS THROUGH SCHURZ QUINTET, 48 TO 12

Schmidt, Dahlberg Lead Champions' Drive.

Lane Tech, recent winner of the University of Chicago holiday week tournament for the second consecutive year, yesterday began defense of its City league heavyweight championship by defeating Schurz, 48 to 12, at Lane.

Schmidt, with seven field goals and a free throw, and Dahlberg, with five baskets and two free throws, led the champions, while Mundt collected seven of Schurz's 12 points. Lane led at the intermission, 20 to 7, and in the third period held the visitors scoreless.

Calumet, Roosevelt Win.

Lane's total stood as the scoring high of the day, although two other teams approached it, Calumet running over Bowen, 45 to 29, and Roosevelt taking a 40 to 25 decision from Sullivan. Schrick, Calumet center, took individual honors with six field goals and as many free throws for a total of 18 points.

Center Possner of Marshall, with 13 points, led his team to a 31 to 8 victory over McKinley in a west section battle. The losers were held to four baskets, two in the first period and one each in the final two. Marshall held a 19 to 4 advantage at half time.

Fenger, Parker Stage Battle.

Fenger and Parker put on one of the best games of the schedule, the former winning 27 to 18, with Rogeveen's four baskets leading the winners. Lake View won a close battle from Waller, 29 to 26. Lake View led at the half, 14 to 12, and 19 to 17 at end of the third quarter. Gowan and Mick headed the victors.

Senn had little trouble in disposing of Amundsen, 30 to 8, and Morgan Park, after a slow first half, defeated Harper, 26 to 13.

In addition, Mayor Kelly gave 44 members of the two teams gold footballs and expressed appreciation of the players' coöperation. Receipts from the charity game went to the Chicago Christmas Benefit fund. Harry Bird, captain of the Lindblom team, and Thomas Byrne, captain of St. Leo, were the first to receive awards.

St. Philip and St. Mel Fives Win Openers

St. Mel, defending lightweight champions, and St. Philip, defending heavies, came through their first round games in the Catholic prep basketball opening sectional rounds last night. St. Mel won from Fenwick, 32 to 23, while St. Philip defeated St. Ignatius, 30 to 14.

One sided victories were registered by the De La Salle heavies, who beat Leo, 43 to 22, and the Mount Carmel heavies, who defeated St. Rita, 48 to 27. De Paul's ponies went overtime to win from St. George, 27 to 25, and De La Salle's lights did likewise before gaining a 25 to 23 decision over Leo.

GLENBARD WINS TWO

A third period rally yesterday enabled the Glenbard heavyweights to win a West Suburban league game from La Grange, 28 to 27. Blair, Bellinger, and Macheobo headed the comeback after the winners had trailed, 9 to 13, at the half. The Glenbard lightweights also triumphed, 29 to 28.

In other West Suburban games yesterday, Hinsdale and York divided, the former's heavies winning, 27 to 15; Downers Grove took a pair from West Chicago, the lights being forced to two overtimes, and Riverside scored a double victory over Maine.

Evanston had little difficulty in taking a Suburban league double-header from Proviso on the victors' floor, the heavies winning, 37 to 26, and the lights taking a 40 to 14 game. Waukegan had two close arguments with Morton, the heavies rallying to win, 30 to 26, and the lights winning, 25 to 21.

In the WAKE of the NEWS

ON THE SET.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Jan. 11.—Of course, The Wake, not accustomed to such early hours, would oversleep on the day of our expected debut in pictures. So it was 9:30 o'clock instead of 8 when we arrived on the set. Palpably, they had not waited for us, for the rest of the cast of this scene was in rehersal, getting spacing and timing before the camera rolled.

After reporting we were placed among the other extras. As near as we could make out and from whispered inquiry, our scene represented a "Dante's Inferno" concession at Coney Island, which had not been doing very well until some one suggested putting pretty girls in it to attract visitors.

As visitors we had to come down a winding passageway into the depths of hell, and it was all of that coming down from above over slippery footing with huge lamps, not showing to the camera but lighting the scene, also impeding our progress. We were in danger of falling into them and they were hot, too.

Locomotion was so difficult we did not space well and had to keep trying it again and again. Finally The Wake stumbled at the bottom within range of the camera and Lefty Hough, unit manager, said: "You better come out of that, old top, and wait for something else or you'll break your neck." He was absolutely correct. It went so badly they finally sent to the wardrobe for rubber soled shoes but fortunately none fitted us.

Then the others started over again and the camera rolled, but Director Lachman kept stopping them with, "Cut it." Something always was wrong.

"Tempo, tempo, that's what makes a picture," he commented aside to us. "The scene must flow out to the audience, not be pushed at them." Perhaps that's the rhythm he insists upon, of which we were told in advance.

There were more than twenty retakes before one was secured which suited. Often it looked all right to us until that "Cut it" came from the director and he explained what was wrong. Then even we could see it, too.

Being an innocent bystander temporarily we could ask questions. Our leads are Spencer Tracy and Claire Trevor, but they aren't in this scene, so Spencer and Claire remained on the set only a short while, but it was different for the rest of us.

Leading the group of supposed visitors down the passageway to the lower depths of hell was Paul Schwengler, old time University of Washington football guard. Paul ordinarily is on the technical staf, but was cast as leading male devil because of his physique. He carried a blazing torch and his costume was Mahatma Gandhi except for a red hood and long red devil's tail. His body was oiled for camera effect. Next was Henry B. Walthall, an old time star who played the Little Colonel in "The Birth of a Nation." Henry acted as guide to the supposed visitors and had some very solemn lines, but he's real friendly-like.

Vivian Oakland and John Murray, married, better known in vaudeville for two decades as Oakland and Murray, were parents of a spoiled child who got lost, causing great search and commotion, finally wailing most convincingly from still lower depths. This child is Jane Withers, latest juvenile star, with whom we've become quite chummy because of sympathy shown when she showed us her decapitated doll, remarking, "See, a naughty man made my dolly pass out."

Others stepping down the passageway were extras like ourself, only we weren't extraing then, thanks to Lefty. O, yes, there were lady devils in the scene. Elsie soon became our favorite lady devil. We don't know her last name, but every one else called her Elsie, so we did, too. You see Elsie stood for almost two hours during all those retakes without hardly moving while holding a blazing torch in all the heat and hell vapors.

The other lady devils rather slouched between shots. We admired Elsie's fortitude and frankly told her so. Elsie says it's easier just to stand than to shift from one foot to another, but from her costume I think she meant from one hip to the other.

The lady devils were dressed in red and one could hardly say they were overdressed because they were chosen for their looks and figures. They wore sort of red tights except there were apertures at the side of the tights showing white which we took to be cuticle. Above the waist the costume was mostly cuticle. However, Elsie, in her costume, was considerable rest to the eyes. O, yes, they also wore long red tails.

We forgot to relate that several times we had to stop. The camera couldn't register because hell vapors became too thick. These vapors were pumped on the scene from an old fire engine on the set and the engine got out of control, so there was nothing to do but wait.

Well, we worked on this scene with little Jane Withers repeating her wailing in good lusty fashion as often as called upon, until nearly 1 o'clock, when we had an hour off for lunch.

This rest was most welcome and a majority of us actors went for lunch over to the Assistance league, a place conducted by society women for some charity. Mrs. Michaud is in charge. She's an aunt of Virginia Michaud, that Northwestern university Theta who warbled in a radio trio. Waitresses are society girls, who not only give their services free but also buy their own lunches. Tips go into the general fund. Mrs. Michaud told us of Victor McLaglen leaving the remainder of a $5 bill as a tip. That sounded too significant, so we said: "That must be a world's record on a circular track," which was a tipoff on what to expect from us. More of our experiences later.

Hamilton and Aids Remain as Navy Coaches

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 11.—(AP)—The Naval Academy Athletic authorities showed their reluctance to disturb a winning combination today in announcing that the same football coaching staf which guided the team through a victorious campaign last fall would be in charge again next season.

Lieut. Thomas J. Hamilton, 29-year-old aviator, who became head coach last spring, and his varsity assistants brought the Navy one of its most successful seasons in more than 50 years of football at the institution. It was climaxed by the 3 to 0 victory over the Army, the first since 1921.

Rip Miller Remains.

Lieut.-Comdr. John H. Brown Jr., director of football and graduate manager of athletics, in announcing the 1935 coaching setup, pointed out that the only changes will be among the junior coaches, necessitated by service demands.

Hamilton will again have Edgar E. [Rip.] Miller, former tackle at Notre Dame, as his line coach. Miller will be assisted by Lieut. John H. Cross, with whom he worked last year.

Wilson Handles Backs.

John N. Wilson, former St. John's college star, and head basketball coach, will remain as varsity backfield coach. He also is the chief football scout. A. K. [Doc] Snyder again will serve as trainer of the football squad.

The only vacancy in the varsity coaching staf is that of end coach, held last fall by Lieut. Oscar E. Hagberg, who is now at the Submarine school, New London, Conn. An assignment to this position is pending.

C., Jan. 11.—(AP)—The University of South Carolina athletic advisory board tonight unanimously elected Don McCallister, 31 year old Toledo, O., high school athletic coach, as head coach of athletics at the university, subject to confirmation by the board of trustees. A former teammate of Red Grange, McCallister played football and basketball at the University of Illinois before his graduation in 1926. He previously had captained teams in three major sports at Carmi, Ill., High school.

After coaching at Palatka, Fla., High school in 1926 and 1927, McCallister turned out football teams at Miami High school in 1928, 1929, and 1930, then coached at Waite High school for the last four seasons.

Sherman Wins 25 Mile Air Race Feature

Miami, Fla., Jan. 11.—(AP)—Singly and by scores, roaring airplanes kept 10,000 spectators busy watching contests for speed, skill and daring in the all-American air races today.

Ideal flying conditions prevailed—a marked contrast to the cold, foggy weather in the north that kept many scheduled entries away.

Stegall Does 150 Miles.

First prize of $50 in the bomb dropping contest went to T. C. Chalk of Miami, who placed his bomb 7 feet 11 inches from the mark, while Dennis Powelson of Lake City, Fla., took the dead stick landing event. His plane stopped two feet 8 inches from the mark.

Roger Don Rae of East Lansing, Mich., won the Green trophy race, the final event today, with an average speed of 225 miles an hour over a 25 mile closed course.

Other features of interest were aerial maneuvers by army, navy and marine planes, and intricate acrobatics by individual pilots.

Ground Army Flyers.

Parachute jumpers, who demanded more money for risking their lives, continued on strike.

The meet will be concluded tomorrow.

MME. SEMBRICH OF OPERA FAME IS DEAD IN EAST

Soprano of Polish Birth Passes at 76.

New York, Jan. 11.—[Special.]—Mme. Marcella Sembrich, 76 years old, internationally known opera singer, died today at her home, 151 Central Park West, after an illness of nearly two months.

MME. SEMBRICH.

Death was due to emphysema and heart complications, from which the former Austrian operatic soprano had been ill since Nov. 15, last. Her home was with her son, Marcel William Stengel, and his wife. They are the only relatives she had in this country.

Mme. Sembrich's death had been expected for several days, and she had been in a coma for some time before the end came.

Born in Austrian Poland.

On the fifteenth day of February in the year 1858 a girl was born to Casimir Kochanska, the village musician of Wisnosky, in Austrian Poland. She was christened Marcella, but years later she took the name of Sembrich, which was her mother's maiden name.

This child was destined to become one of the greatest sopranos that ever lived, and to win not merely the critical admiration of the world of opera and the whole world of music, but the love and affection, as well, of continents.

It is at least doubtful if any operatic prima donna quite achieved to the place occupied by Mme. Sembrich in American hearts. It is generally agreed that among the splendid divas of her time—Nordica, Eames, Calvé, many more—she held first place in the affections of all sorts of men and women.

First Music Lesson at 4.

This woman, whose life was one endless series of artistic triumphs, and who retired from the stages of her glory when she was still receiving the plaudits of the world, received her first music lesson at the age of 4. She began with the piano, and at 6 began to play on a violin that was manufactured for her by her father.

Her local celebrity became so great that the great Franz Liszt was persuaded to judge her talents. She played for him on piano and violin and sang for him as well. When she stood back modestly for his verdict she heard this:

"You have three pairs of wings, little one, on which to fly to fame. You can become a great pianist, a great violinist or a great singer."

She decided while still a child to use the wings of songs, and went to study at Lemburg under Wilhelm Stengel, a young teacher who became her husband some years later. She worked enormously, tirelessly.

Makes Debut in Athens.

She was sent to Vienna to study under Rokitansky, then to Milan to receive further training from Lamperti. She made her debut in 1877, in athens, where she starred in "I Puritani," presented by the Italian stage of Athens. The next year found her back in Vienna, studying German repertoire with Richard Levy.

From 1878 to 1880 she held an engagement in the Court theater at Dresden and thereafter, her career fairly launched, she appeared in all of the important capitals of Europe, arousing immense enthusiasm wherever she went.

She made her American debut at the Metropolitan Opera house on Oct. 24, 1883, in "Lucia," and she sang with the Metropolitan for twenty-five seasons before she finally left the operatic stage. That was in 1909. She made her farewell European appearance at the Royal Opera house in Dresden in March, 1909.

Her voice was a pure soprano of exquisite quality, ranging from G below the treble clef to F above it. She had a wide acquaintance with the works of the great composers and her repertory included more than thirty operas.

After leaving the operatic stage Mme. Sembrich devoted herself for some years to concert work, and then established a studio for teaching in New York. Out of the hundreds who came to her for training she selected a few each year with whom to work. Alma Gluck, Dusalina Giannini, and Marion Talley were among her most successful students.

LITTLE ORPHAN ANNIE: Just Around the Bend

Outgrowth of St. Louis "Movie War."

St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 11.—[Special.]—Nine motion picture companies and six of their executives were named in federal indictments returned here today in connection with a grand jury investigation of an alleged conspiracy to violate the Sherman anti-trust law.

At the same time it became known that the department of justice, which supplied the St. Louis grand jury with evidence, has also probed claims of anti-trust law violations in other parts of the country. Widespread action is expected to result with more evidence being presented soon, probably at Los Angeles.

The companies indicted here are Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc.; First National Pictures, Inc.; Vitaphone corporation, Paramount Pictures Distributing company, Inc.; R-K-O Distributing corporation, Warner Brothers Circuit Management corporation, General Theatrical Enterprises, Inc., and Paramount Pictures Distributing Companies, Inc.

The action is the outgrowth of a St. Louis "movie war." The indictments allege that major producing and exhibiting concerns sought to intimidate and coerce owners of buildings and in general conspired in restraint of trade.

The offense charged is a misdemeanor punishable by a year in jail and a fine of $5,000.

CRIMINAL COURT.

EDWARD BOLIESEGA, robbery, sentenced to 1 year to life in the penitentiary by Judge Harry B. Miller.

HOWARD CRAINICH, rape, sentenced to 30 years in the penitentiary and also to 1 to 20 years for robbery; MILDRED BELK, robbery, sentenced to 1 year in the Dwight penitentiary; STEVE LAZARZ and LEO KUTA, robbery, sentenced to 1 year to life each in the penitentiary by Judge Walter P. Steffen.

True bills were reported voted by the grand jury yesterday charging Martin Salzman, 46 years old, 1412 South Central Park avenue, and Attorney Julius Reznik, with conspiracy to obtain money by false pretenses from relatives of Rudolph Pisani, convicted kidnaper and arsonist.

Assistant State's Attorney Marshall Kearney, who presented the case to the grand jurors, said Reznik, posing as a "Mr. Newman," visited the Pisani home and offered to obtain a new trial for Rudolph Pisani for $3,000. On Thursday he sent Salzman as his emissary, and Lieut. Thomas Kelly of the state's attorney's police, who was lying in waited, arrested Salzman.

Pisani is serving a 25 year sentence for his part in the kidnaping of Harry Welch, Toledo clothier, and a one to two year sentence as a member of an arson ring. Attorney Reznik is under conviction for subornation of perjury, appeal from which is pending before the Supreme court. Reznik is being sought on the new indictment. Salzman waived immunity and testified before the grand jury.

ASSESSOR BOARD EX-WORKERS WIN A BACK PAY WRIT

Circuit Judge Harry M. Fisher yesterday issued a mandamus order compelling county officials to pay $49,444 in back salaries to 300 former employés of the old board of assessors. The money represented salaries due the employés for overtime work during the months of May and June of 1931 in completing the 1930 assessment.

The county had previously refused to pay the salaries, contending that the assessing officials had exhausted the money appropriated for that use. The court, however, upheld the contention of Attorney Victor Frohlich, representing the employés, that the county was liable for the back pay, inasmuch as the county had benefited from the employés' work.

Police Captain Max L. Danner announced yesterday that Meyer Beider, 31 years old, 1820 Clifton Park avenue, would be charged with manslaughter in the death of Miss Harriet Cook, 39 years old, 3809 North Harlem avenue.

Miss Cook was killed Thursday night when Beider's automobile overturned and crushed her at Harlem and Diversey avenues. Her mother, Mrs. M. H. Cook, 64 years old, and her brother, Frank, 15 years old, who were walking with her at the intersection, were injured.

Police said that Beider lost control of the car because he was intoxicated. Surrounded by his four children, Beider heard the inquest into the death of Miss Cook continued until Feb. 5 pending recovery of her mother and brother.

Two deaths yesterday increased the Cook county motor toll to 20 for the year. The victims:

James S. Noonan, 68 years old, resident of a relief shelter at 758 Harrison street. Found dead at Wabash avenue and 14th street of injuries apparently caused by an automobile.

The car in which they were riding collided with an automobile driven by Thomas Rush, 32 years old, 7246 University avenue, at Jackson boulevard and Columbus drive.

Sherritt's father, who is the head of the Wilson Imperial company, railway supply concern at 53 West Jackson boulevard, was notified of the crash in Coral Gables, Fla. He had returned to his home there by plane after attending the wedding here.

News of the Radio Stations

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Despite published reports that the American Broadcasting system is to fold up, negotiations were near completion yesterday assuring the continued operation of the network with which WJJD and WIND became affiliated three months ago. Under the new setup WHN is to replace WMCA as the key station for ABS in New York. The network programming will be done by Loew's, owner and operator of WHN. George B. Storer will continue as ABS president. The Chicago outlets will stick with ABS.

WHN's biggest name is Maj. Edward Bowes, whose amateur nights seem to have been responsible for fanning the amateur passion into national flame. Maj. Bowes is program director of WHN. The interests operating WMCA are reported to have withdrawn from ABS because the network failed to attract sponsored programs as quickly as anticipated.

W-G-N will make an exclusive broadcast of the tenth annual Notre Dame football testimonial banquet from the university campus from 8:15 to 9 o'clock next Tuesday evening. As toastmaster, John T. McGovern, councilor of the Carnegie Foundation, will introduce the Rev. Father John O'Hara, president of the university; Coach Elmer Layden, Coach Noble Kizer of Purdue, Arch Ward, TRIBUNE sports editor; Al Williams, flying ace, and other notables. The Notre Dame band will present Ferde Grofe's "Knute Rockne Suite" and there will also be a musical tribute to the late Father Charles L. O'Donnell, former president. The glee club will sing several numbers. Bob Elson will announce the program.

Wendell Hall is in New York on business. His broadcast tomorrow night will emanate from Radio City. . . . The Alexanders are now bracketed together on WBBM-CBS-Alexander Woolcott at 6 Sunday evenings; Alexander McQueen at 6:30. Tomorrow night McQueen, the "Nothing but the Truth" expounder, will tell what he knows about colored snow—red, green, blue, and black. . . . Pat Flanagan is in Passavant hospital because of a throat infection.

Good or bad, Beatrice Lillie's new program is not being treated with indifference. Dozens of persons have expressed their enthusiasm over her lively show, but it seems that she made others plenty angry. The line that roiled them most was, "Why, the old ba-chelor!" And the one that followed, "The old bender from South Bachelor," was a little too fast for others. But we'll bet they all go on listening.

ATTORNEY KURZ, IN PRACTICE HERE SINCE 1888, DIES

Adolph Kurz, 67 years old, expert on corporation law who had lived in Chicago for 55 years, died in the Michael Reese hospital yesterday after a month's illness.

Born in Germany, Mr. Kurz came to Chicago as a boy. He entered a law office, and in 1888 was graduated from the Chicago College of Law, entering practice immediately. Early in his career he specialized in corporation law and quickly won a reputation as an authority on the subject. He was for many years associated with James Rosenthal, but of recent years had practiced with his nephew, Sidney Levy.

Mr. Kurz was married in 1914 to Miss Jennie Mandel of Chicago, who died in 1926. He lived at the Standard club. From 1907 until his death he was president of the Jewish Home Finding society and was prominently identified with other charitable activities.

Survivors are two brothers, Sol and Max of Chicago; and two sisters, Mrs. Johanna Duetelbaum of Chicago and Mrs. Julia Samter of Detroit.

CATHOLIC SCHOOL REPORT REVEALS ENROLLMENT UP

Cardinal Told of Year's Achievements.

The Catholic schools of the archdiocese of Chicago have completed an excellent year, with additional schools being opened, others under construction, and with enrolment showing an increase over the previous year. That was the report presented yesterday to Cardinal Mundelein and other officials.

"The favorable condition of our schools is not accidental," said the report, submitted by the Rev. Daniel F. Cunningham, superintendent of schools in the archdiocese. "It is the fruit of earnest effort on the part of pastors, of deep solicitude for the young on the part of teaching brothers, sisters, and priests; of willing sacrifice on the part of Catholic parents, and of prudent guidance on the part of our leader, who, for the last eighteen years has inspired and encouraged every educational enterprise."

Despite the economic troubles, the report said, the 200,949 pupils in 461 Catholic schools enjoyed all the educational benefits which were offered during more prosperous years.

Of the total enrollment 19,222 were enrolled in 65 high schools, an increase of 188 over the previous year. The year before a decrease of 495 had been noted. In the 388 elementary schools in and out of the city 168,556 children were enrolled, a decrease of 2,711 under last year's total.

Two new schools for colored children were added to the elementary grades and work was begun during the year on two new school buildings to replace antiquated structures.

ALL DIRECTORS OF CONTINENTAL BANK RETAINED

Dividends Must Wait, Says Cummings.

All sitting directors of the Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust company were reëlected yesterday at a quiet annual meeting of stockholders. Three vacancies on the board, two caused by resignations occasioned by the banking act of 1933 and one by death, were left unfilled. This reduced the board from 25 to 22 members.

W. J. CUMMINGS.

Walter J. Cummings, chairman of the board, told stockholders that resumption of dividends on the common stock is not advisable as yet, despite favorable earnings of the bank during 1934. He stressed the importance of building up surplus and reserves.

"When I talked to you last year," he said, "I stated that it would be my endeavor to make this bank not the largest in the country but the safest; also that I was looking forward to a time when dividends could be paid on the common stock.

Urges Ample Surplus.

"In my opinion this should not be done at this time. It is far better for us to maintain an ample surplus and adequate reserves and wait a while longer for dividends."

Notwithstanding the suspension of common stock dividends, no more than 100 stockholders, other than officials, attended the meeting. More than 90 per cent of stock was represented by proxy, however, including the vote of two-thirds of the stock of Frederick D. Gallagher, manager of the Chicago office of the Reconstruction Finance corporation, which owns 1,500,000 preferred shares. With more than 2,000,000 votes cast, this showed a representation of more than two-thirds of the 750,000 common shares.

A humorous incident was provided when it was found that Gallagher had not received a ballot. Gallagher, incidentally, made the motion for adjournment, which was carried before a single question had been asked.

Cummings Explains Chargeoffs.

The meeting continued a few minutes longer, however, when two questions were presented. In answer to the first, Mr. Cummings picked up a memorandum before him, with the comment that he had expected to be asked if there were further losses to be charged off for previous years after the 1934 writedown of $10,986,776.

"Every item," he read from the memorandum, "classed as a loss by the controler of the currency and the clearing house examiner has been written off. Whether any more of these assets acquired prior to Jan. 1, 1934, will develop into losses is something I cannot foretell. Against the possibility of further chargeoffs we have sizable recoveries in prospect and the demonstrated substantial earning power of the bank."

Delay Retiring RFC Stock.

Answering the second question, the chairman said that building up surplus was preferable to retiring preferred stock held by the RFC. The retirement is not to begin before Jan. 1, 1936, he pointed out, and the dividend rate of 3½ per cent is a cheap price for money.

Mr. Cummings said that $385,000,000 in excess funds had been invested in government bonds, interest on which netted "a very substantial income during the year."

The board of directors reëlected all officers and named John W. Nichols assistant cashier.

The Lake Shore Trust and Savings bank made no changes in its personnel, renaming as chairman of the board Isaac Miller Hamilton, president of the Federal Life Insurance company. Joseph R. Frey, president, reported profitable operation of the bank last year and an increase in deposits of 24 per cent from the close of 1933 and 109 per cent from March 3, 1933, when the bank moratorium was declared.

Halsted Exchange National.

The Halsted Exchange National bank directors elected LeRoy A. Listug president to succeed C. F. Kuehnle Jr. Mr. Listug recently resigned as vice president of the District National bank to become executive vice president of the Halsted bank. Harold H. Stout, manager of the credit department, was elected assistant cashier. All other officers were renamed.

Main State bank directors, after reelection by stockholders, promoted Elmer S. Aschermann from assistant cashier to cashier. William Rusnak, cashier and vice president, dropped the first title.

The Prairie State bank of Oak Park reëlected all directors. The board then elevated Fred J. Spring, vice president and cashier, to the vacant position of president. K. M. Darrow was promoted from assistant cashier to cashier.

Oak Lawn Elects Cashier.

D. Triezenberg, acting cashier of the Oak Lawn Trust and Savings bank, Oak Lawn, was elected cashier. Mrs. P. J. Adams was elected assistant cashier. Other officers and directors were reëlected.

Emmett J. McCarthy was elected a director of the Pioneer Trust and Savings bank. All officers were reëlected.

Directors and officers of the Cicero State bank were reëlected.

W. D. Braidwood and C. J. Alger were elected vice presidents of the Argo State bank. All directors were reëlected.

The Lawndale National bank directors continued the 1934 officers.

Nation's Eyes Turn to Court Gold Decision

BY HOWARD WOOD.

The drama of gold grows more intense. While the nine distinguished gentlemen of the United States Supreme court ponder the evidence presented to them by lawyers arguing for and against the constitutionality of congress' action revoking the "gold clause" on contracts, American business stands at attention, wondering what values will be. The yardstick is being measured.

The widow living on the income from her insurance money, the Iowa hog raiser, the pensioner, the American living abroad, the butcher, the baker, and the candlestick maker—all are watching the outcome because it will vitally affect them.

Not since the New Dealers removed the dollar from the gold standard and debased it has there been a development of such potential importance as the forthcoming decision of the Supreme court. And there is no way of guessing what that decision will be.

* *

Interest in the subject has been growing rapidly as people have begun to realize the significance of this decision. The high court, it is true, is not being called upon to decide the constitutionality of the New Dealers' debasement of the dollar. Congress has the power to regulate the value of money. The court need merely decide whether those people who hold bonds payable in gold of standard weight and fineness are entitled to more dollars in payment because dollars have been debased.

An adverse decision on the constitutionality of congress' abrogation of the "gold clause" in such contracts, however, would be enough to force drastic changes in the administration's monetary policies, possibly forcing a choice between a return to the former dollar of 25.8 grains of gold or drastic currency inflation.

Even the possibility of such an abrupt change in the administration's monetary policies has been causing an upheaval in the markets. And daily, as people become more fully acquainted with the potentialities, the excitement grows.

* *

The outstanding development yesterday was a flood of transactions in the government bond market. Banks and investors were selling government bonds which have been issued during the last year without the gold clause and buying bonds of the older issues which do contain the gold clause. This developed a peculiar double trend in government bond prices, prices of some issues going up as much as a full point while other issues were selling off. Government bond dealers reported the busiest single day in years. The New York Stock exchange reported the biggest volume of transactions in government bonds since Aug. 22, 1934.

In foreign exchange transactions the American dollar rose sharply against all important foreign currencies. The rise against Swiss and Dutch currencies was so substantial that again it became profitable for those nations to ship gold to the United States.

* *

Stocks were weak, especially the gold and silver mining shares and other so-called inflation favorites which have been booming during the last year because of dollar debasement. About 90 per cent of all stocks traded in yesterday on the New York Stock exchange registered losses. Some of the preferred stocks dropped as much as $5 per share.

At the Chicago Board of Trade a similar selling wave drove wheat and corn prices down 2 cents a bushel. Heavy selling was reported from the east where concern over the gold clause case has been greatest.

All of this market activity has been the result of a desire to hedge against a vague and entirely unpredictable development. What the decision of the court will be nobody knows. And even if the court holds the congressional abrogation of the gold clause unconstitutional, nobody knows what steps the administration subsequently would decide to take—whether it would print greenbacks or move in the opposite direction and restore the dollar to its former value in terms of gold.

The markets, therefore, are reflecting nervousness rather than foresight.

DOLLAR BOOSTED BY GOLD CLAUSE TEST IN COURT

New York, Jan. 11.—(AP)—Moving under the influence of general interest in New York and abroad in the gold clause case now before the Supreme court at Washington, the dollar turned strong against leading foreign monies in the exchange markets today.

In London the dollar was moderately better at $4.91 9-16 to the pound sterling, while in New York the British unit lost a full cent from Thursday to close at $4.90⅜. Early trading in Paris lifted the American currency to the equivalent of 6.615 cents to the French franc, and in New York the franc was down .02 of a cent at 6.60 cents.

At the closing New York quotation on the French franc the dollar was worth $1.0051, compared with $1.0020 yesterday. Calculated on the old par of the franc the gold value of the dollar was 59.36 cents, against 59.18 yesterday.

Swiss francs and Dutch guilders eased below their gold import points, with the former 10 points lower at 32.40 cents and the latter down 17 points at 67.63 cents. German marks were 7 points weaker at 40.18 cents, while Canadian dollars dropped ¼ cent to $1.00¼.

Bullion brokers in London raised the price of gold 5 pence to 141 shillings 9½ pence a fine ounce, equivalent to $34.82, based on the opening of sterling at $4.91¼.

Reserve Bank of Chicago Re-elects All Its Officers

Directors of the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago yesterday reëlected all officers and continued standing committees with the same membership. J. J. Endres, assistant auditor, was made auditor. The rediscount rate was not changed.

Many personal fortunes running from a million to 250 million dollars have thus far been disclosed in reports filed with the commission. The reports were submitted under provisions of the security law requiring corporations to divulge the identity of all persons holding more than 10 per cent of their stock.

Meanwhile house leaders, led by Chairman Rayburn [Dem., Tex.] of the house interstate commerce commission, restored $320,000 to the security commission's appropriation, bringing the total to $2,000,000. The appropriating committee recommended $1,679,244 although the commission asked $4,000,000.

The commission's work would be seriously crippled without additional funds, Chairman Kennedy told the house committee. Ferdinand Pecora emerged from a conference with President Roosevelt saying funds were absolutely necessary.

Stock Not Total Fortunes.

Lammot du Pont, president of du Pont, was disclosed as the holder of 42,035 du Pont common, valued at $4,000,000, and 49,100 shares of General Motors, and 21 shares of General Motors preferred.

Kettering's Stock $15,000,000.

C. F. Kettering, General Motors corporation director and inventor, held some $15,000,000 in 449,829 shares of common stock in that company.

John Stuart of Chicago, president of the Quaker Oats company, was listed with 19,859 common shares and 681 preferred in that company, worth well in excess of two and a half millions.

Trade's Fright Over Gold Suit Breaks Grains

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

A moderate selling panic developed on the Chicago Board of Trade yesterday as speculators were seized with anxiety over the potentialities of a Supreme court decision in the pending gold case which might force the country back on a deflationary monetary policy. Remote as the possibility of such a decision appeared a few days ago, the severe grilling which the court has given the government attorneys has caused speculators to become extremely uneasy.

Grain prices tumbled sharply on the heaviest trading that has been witnessed in the market in several days. The principal futures in wheat and corn fell more than 2 cents a bushel. Contributing to the selling was the weakness that developed in other commodity and security markets. Stock prices and cotton sold off sharply and provisions showed extreme weakness.

Big Holders Are Sellers.

Commission houses handling large business were the biggest sellers of grains. Much of the liquidation was said to have originated in the east where uneasiness over the gold case has been acute. The selling was particularly heavy at times and it was only the steady commercial demand in the market that prevented a wider break in prices. Removal of hedges in the future market against sales of cash grain and consumer buying of the May futures provided an important support for the market.

The market broke and rallied intermittently throughout the day, but a final wave of selling toward the end of the session resulted in grains closing near the low quotations of the day. The May futures in both wheat and corn were the principal targets of the selling. Closing quotations on the May futures were:

	Yesterday.	Thursday.	Week ago.
Wheat	$ .99⅜	$1.01½	$ .99⅜
Corn	.89	.91¼	.89⅜
Oats	.54	.55¼	.53¾
Rye	.73½	.74¾	.75¼

Cash Demand Increases.

The decline in prices, however, brought demand in the cash market and sales of grain to be shipped were comparatively heavy. Shipping sales of wheat amounted to 73,000 bushels and 71,000 bushels of corn were sold to go out.

The possible effect on grain prices of a decision adverse to the government on the gold case is a moot question. The extent to which drouth and national economic conditions brought about the advance in prices and what part was played by the government's inflationary steps is difficult to reckon. If the court's decision should make it necessary for congress to revalue the dollar upward it would stimulate importations of foreign grains.

HOWELL ASKS COURT ENJOIN PROSECUTION BY U. S. IN GRAIN CASE

Washington, D. C., Jan. 11.—[Special.]—Suit was brought today in the District of Columbia Supreme court by Thomas M. Howell, Chicago grain trader, seeking to enjoin the federal government from prosecuting its action against him for alleged violation of the grain futures act.

Howell is charged with manipulating the price of corn on the Chicago Board of Trade in 1931 and 1932. Hearings on the charges were scheduled to begin Jan. 14 in Chicago before a special examiner of the department of agriculture.

Howell asserts in his bill filed today that the action against him lacks a constitutional basis and he asks the court for an injunction to prevent Secretary Wallace, Attorney General Cummings, and Secretary of Commerce Roper, the members of the grain futures commission, from proceeding with the case.

Howell asserts that the proceedings are illegal because they are judicial in character, although the commission does not constitute a court. His attorney, John Walsh, also claims that he will be required to submit papers and records at the hearing in violation of the protection afforded him in this respect by the constitution.

The procedure followed under such cases is to have a special examiner take evidence, after which the commission makes a final decision.

The commission postponed its hearing today on similar charges pending against Arthur W. Cutten, another Chicago speculator. Attorney General Cummings was unable to attend the meeting because he was before the Supreme court in the gold clause case. It was indicated that the Cutten hearing will be held Saturday morning in Secretary Wallace's office.

USE OF CIGARETS SETS NEW HIGH MARK IN 1934

New York, Jan. 11.—[Special.]—Cigaret consumption last year set a new all-time record, according to Standard Statistics company, which today estimated sales at 125,000,000,000 units. The company pointed out that the three leading brands ran neck and neck last year in their bid for public favor.

Sales of Chesterfields, Liggett & Myers product, lead the others with estimated sales of 34,500,000,000. Camels, manufactured by Reynolds Tobacco, were second with 33,800,000,000 unit sales. American Tobacco company's Lucky Strike brand ran third on sales at about 33,000,000,000 units.

The trend of cigaret sales as a whole from 1929 to date was shown as follows [in billions of units]: 1929, 119.0; 1930, 119.6; 1931, 113.5; 1932, 103.5; 1933, 111.8, and 1934, 125.0.

Rayburn Asks Elimination of Holding Units

Washington, D. C., Jan. 11.—[Special.]—Foreshadowing specific legislation carrying out President Roosevelt's mandate to "end the evils of holding companies," Representative Rayburn of Texas today asked congress to "eliminate rather than regulate" this indirect method of corporate control.

The chairman of the interstate and foreign commerce committee set forth the results of its investigation of practices of holding companies in the railroad and public utility field with a bill of complaint listing seventeen abuses to which he said the system lent itself.

"If the management of utilities which sell their services locally is to be subjected to some holding company in New York City, then the people of the country will turn to Washington for relief from the arbitrary decisions and the poor judgment of these self-appointed managers in the top holding companies," he said.

Regulation Not Enough.

Although confident that congress possessed the necessary power to regulate the rates, charges and practices of all holding companies, Rayburn pointed out that "bales of securities capitalizing hope of profits," had been issued by those top companies. He warned that in attempting merely to regulate them, congress by implication might "put the stamp of approval upon all the stock watering and inflation during the last fifteen years."

Rayburn differed in this from the position of the federal trade commission which recently reported to congress that holding companies should be "regulated." The commission is now preparing a bill understood to be at the direction of the administration which would carry out the regulation proposed. Although aware of this, Rayburn said no bill on the subject would be reported which did not coincide with the views of his committee.

"Creature of Statutes."

"The results of the ingenuity of able lawyers to persuade legislatures to write cunning statutes and courts to place shrewd construction on these statutes has given the American people a master in the form of a holding company. This creature of our statutes holds under its control billions of dollars worth of property scattered throughout the country and some times around the world."

Among abuses disclosed by the committee during the course of its investigation, Rayburn mentioned that holding companies had been utilized in paper transactions to defeat assessments of income taxes to the federal government. The holding company commonly lent itself to payment of large salaries and bonuses to its officials, "sometimes of astonishing magnitude," he said.

Rail Freight Starts Year with Upturn

Washington, D. C., Jan. 11.—[Special.]—Freight traffic on the railroads in the United States last week gained more than seasonally over the preceding week, rising 17.1 per cent, although 0.4 per cent under a year ago. The total was 498,078 cars, against 425,120 in the preceding week, up 72,953 cars.

In the corresponding week of 1934 the carriers hauled 500,813 cars of freight and in 1933 they used 439,469 cars, a drop of 2,740 and a gain of 58,604 cars, respectively. The gain over the preceding week was brought about principally in heavier coal and miscellaneous freight movements.

Merchandise Shows Increase.

OUTPUT OF GOLD SETS RECORD; U. S. POLICY FACTOR

New York, Jan. 11.—[Special.]—More gold was produced in 1934 than in any other year of the world's history, total output being estimated by experts today at more than 26,000,000 fine ounces, compared with last year's peak production of 25,369,879 ounces. For the first eleven months of the year, 24,179,000 ounces of new metal was reported by the American Bureau of Metal Statistics.

Close students of precious metals point to several prime influences accounting for the increased world supply. They include the Roosevelt administration policy of raising the gold price and nationalization of the metal; the great amounts reclaimed by trinkets, jewelry and such in this country, Great Britain and India and Russia; the new importance of Russia as a producer, and the intensified search everywhere due to economic deflation's enhancement of the purchasing power of gold.

MILE A MINUTE STEAM TRAIN SHOWS PROFIT

Fares About Double Operating Cost.

Results of the first week's operation of the "400," crack mile-a-minute train of the Chicago and North Western railway between Chicago and St. Paul-Minneapolis, have exceeded even the rosiest hopes for its success, company officials admitted yesterday.

Public acceptance of the train was prompt, travel has been heavy and profits from operation have been approximately double operating costs, according to R. Thompson, passenger traffic manager. The road figures its operating cost at around 95 cents a mile, or a varying figure of $375 to $400 for each trip, each way. Through passengers carried between Chicago and Twin Cities have averaged 100 per trip, which at $7.50 per person produces a trip revenue of $750.

Carries Additional Passengers.

Added to this about 50 passengers ride the train each trip to intermediate points. Income from this source varies but swells the total appreciably. In several instances more passengers sought parlor car space than there were seats.

In planning the train the road intended to use five cars, but an extra parlor car was added for the initial trip because of heavy registrations. This car has never been dropped. Another car can be added and schedules still be maintained, but this will represent the maximum space.

The "400," so named because it covers the 400 mile trip in approximately that many minutes, lops 2 hours 50 minutes from old schedules between Chicago and the Twin Cities.

Claim High Long-Run Speed.

The train maintains an average speed just under 60 miles an hour, which railroad men claim establishes a world's record for a run of that length. At times a speed of 90 miles an hour is maintained.

Leaving Chicago at 3:30 o'clock in the afternoon, the seven hour run deposits passengers in St. Paul in ample time for a full night's sleep. Business has been quick to recognize this fact, officials said yesterday, for a large proportion of the passenger list is made up of business men.

OLD POSTOFFICE AGAIN TO HANDLE REGISTERED MAIL

Registered mail delivery service in the U. S. Courthouse building, which was discontinued when the new postoffice was opened on Canal street, will be resumed Monday, following several months of negotiations by the Chicago Association of Commerce.

Registered mail of value—stocks, bonds, jewelry and other valuables—consigned to addresses within the delivery area of the old general postoffice, will now be held there subject to call at the registry windows. This mail was formerly delivered but following a daylight holdup outside the building several years ago, many firms initiated the practice of sending their own messengers.

Transfer of the delivery point across the river increased inconvenience, particularly for Michigan avenue concerns, and increased the danger of holdups because of the greater distance involved. The association started to campaign to restore the loop delivery point in October, 1934, when President George W. Young protested to Postmaster General James A. Farley.

HEAVY SELLING PUSHES STOCKS DOWN SHARPLY

View on Gold Clause Suit Brings Liquidation.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 11.—Some rather tall guessers as to what might happen if the Supreme court should decide against the New Deal in the so-called gold clause suit went the rounds of the stock speculative fraternity today and the immediate reaction was a selling run that upset prices in all departments. The close found prices 1 to 3 points below their previous levels.

Of the 829 issues traded only 87 showed net gains for the day. A total of 118 held unchanged and 624 closed lower. Trade picked up on the decline and sales mounted to 1,378,910 shares, almost double that of yesterday.

Some of the more panicky of the sellers seemed to take it for granted that the questions being asked by members of the high court in regard to the source of the authority exercised by the President and congress in setting aside the "gold clause" in securities, foreshadowed a decision holding the act unconstitutional.

Take Other Views.

In other quarters it was felt that too much was being made of the inquiries and too much stress laid on the possibilities of a decision unfavorable to the New Deal idea. Brokers were at pains to point out to the more troubled ones that it was risky to assume how the court may act simply because it asks for help on the legal questions involved. However, a considerable portion of the speculative public was concerned over the situation and was out to cash in on holdings.

Gold mining and metal shares bore the brunt of the selling wave. U. S. Smelting broke more than 4 points under a flood of liquidation orders, but recovered fractionally, and losses of 2 points or more were borne by Howe Sound, American Smelting and Cerro de Pasco.

Tobacco, steel, rubber, and railroad equipment shares slid down in a body without any great show of resistance. Liggett & Myers finished the session $3.25 a share below Thursday. American Tobacco B was off 3 points.

Preferred Losses Large.

Losses in some of the preferreds ran as high as 5 points. The seniors of Goodrich, Goodyear, Bangor and Aroostook, American Locomotive, Armour, and Revere Brass were among the hardest hit. Chemicals had another bad day, Allied dropping more than 3 points and du Pont half as much.

The rails were decidedly weak. Public utilities showed the most resistance of any group to the selling being steeled by discussions looking toward a compromise on the rate controversy.

American Can was conspicuously weak in the industrial division, dropping two points. Independent movements of consequence were few, but Coca Cola provided one of them by jumping more than four points to a new high price, the best since 1930. Farm stocks sold lower.

BUTTER FUTURES DECLINE; EGGS UNCHANGED TO LOWER

Bearish news predominated butter futures on the Chicago Mercantile exchange yesterday, the close being ½ to ¾ cents per pound lower. Eggs closed unchanged to ¼ cent lower.

Cash butter market dropped as much as 1¾ cents with the weakness there bringing hurried profit taking and new selling into the futures.

Sales: Butter, 105 cars; eggs, 38 cars. Prices follow:

DRY GOODS.

NEW YORK, Jan. 11.—(AP)—Brown sheetings for bag purposes were stronger today with sales of one to two hundred thousand yards more frequent. Print cloths were steady and quiet. Interest increased in printed wash fabrics. Business gained steadily in finished goods markets. The demand for worsted dress goods for spring has already supplied many mills with orders for the next six weeks. Sales of acetate rayon yarns for March are absorbing available production rapidly. The call for sheer silks increased. Burlap markets were strong on reports of curtailed jute acreage for the coming year.

New York, Jan. 11.—[Special.]—Today's bond market produced something that some specialists in United States government securities have been expecting ever since the gold legislation was brought into the Supreme court for a test, namely, the development of a dual market for treasury bonds.

With the issue still in doubt but standing out as one of the most important questions of the day, there was considerable switching into gold payment bonds and out of those lacking the gold clause. This tendency was noticeable only in the treasury list. Gains running up to a half point or more were recorded in the older issues.

Nongold Bonds Discarded.

The issues that were discarded in favor of those having the gold clause were the 3¼s of 1941 and 1946, the 4¼-3¼s, the 3s of 1948, and the 3½s due in 1952, the last named issue being less than a month old. The advance in the gold bonds was arrested only by the disposition of some banks to take advantage of substantial paper profits.

The majority of government issues firmed 6-32ds to 23-32ds of a point. The principal activity was in the called Liberty Fourth 4¼s and the Treasury 3⅜s of 1941-'43. Small losses were suffered by Treasury 4¼-3¼s, 3¼s of 1941 and 1944-'46, 3½s of 1949-'52, federal farm 3¼s, and home owners' loan 3s and 4s.

Best Corporation Issues Strong.

While high grade corporate bonds were strong there was no evidence that they were being bought because of their gold payment status. The advances made today in this type were no greater than they have been day after day for several weeks.

New high prices were recorded in a number of gilt edged rails, but they were the same issues that have been making new highs daily since the beginning of the year.

The turnover of all bonds amounted to $26,915,000, par value, the largest aggregate for a single day since Aug. 9, last. Of this total federal issues accounted for some $14,440,000, the heaviest volume since Aug. 22.

Stein Cosmetics.

Investors' Guide: Can you give me some information on Stein Cosmetics company?—K. W.

Answer: Stein Cosmetics Company, Inc., controls formulas for compositions and synthetic materials used in the manufacture of perfumes and other toilet preparations. Its factory is in New York City.

On Aug. 10, 1934, the company reported that gross sales for the first half of the 1934 calendar year were about 40 per cent ahead of the first six months of 1933.

Year ended April 30.	Net sales.	Net. inc. com. shs.	Inc. per
1934	$ 480,000	$ 18,000	$0.10
1933	411,000	*93,000	*.54
1932	1,116,000	*26,000	*.15
1931	2,548,000	223,000	1.26

*Loss.

After adjustments, surplus dropped $164,000 for the year ended April 30, 1934.

On April 30, 1934, current assets, including cash of only $4,000, totaled $219,000 and current liabilities, including $29,000 notes payable to banks, totaled $101,000. On March 1, 1934, $220,000 of notes matured. By June 13, 1934, the majority of the holders had agreed to extend accrued interest and maturity to March 1, 1937, and accept interest at only 5 per cent instead of 7 per cent. There are outstanding 532 shares of $2 no par preferred and 176,036 shares of no par common.

Nothing has been paid on the preferred since July 1, 1932, and nothing has ever been paid on the common. The common is purely a speculation.

Kansas Gas and Electric.

Investors' Guide: What territory does Kansas Gas and Electric serve? How about their 4½s, due 1980—rating and denominations?—G. N.

Answer: Kansas Gas and Electric company is an operating company controled by American Power and Light company. It operates in southeastern Kansas, serving a community predominantly agricultural with a population of about 250,000.

Resisting the trend of decreased earnings experienced by utilities as a whole, charges in the twelve months to Nov. 30, 1934, were covered 1.99 times, against 1.88 times in the preceding twelve months. They were covered 1.84 times in 1933, 2.12 times in 1932 and 2.27 times in 1931.

The $16,000,000 first mortgage 4½s, due 1980, come in denominations of $500, $1,000 and $5,000 [$5,000 pieces only when registered]. Because of good protection, both as to security and earnings, they are considered sound.

BUSINESS GAINS PASS ESTIMATES, REVIEW ASSERTS

Says Consumer Demand Grows Steadily.

New York, Jan. 11.—[Special.]—Developments thus far in January have intensified the brightness of trade prospects for the year, Dun & Bradstreet say in their Trade Review of the week. Early estimates, at least for the first quarter, were too conservative, the report said.

Low inventories, spreading demand and rising employment totals will contribute strength to accelerated production and distribution before the quarter ends, the survey predicted, pointing out the increased corporate earnings, larger bank clearings, higher commodity quotations and sustained gains in retail sales volume.

Reports Nation More Hopeful.

"A new hope appears to be motivating action in all directions, as the entire nation moves forward in its progress of permanent reconstruction," the review said.

It is pointed out that consumer demand, instead of dwindling, as expected after the heavy December buying, has become constantly stronger. Retail sales thus far this year are placed 10 to 15 per cent higher than for the corresponding 1934 period.

The review reported that gains in the middle west had shown expansion of as much as 25 per cent. In New England average retail sales for January are running higher than December and 8 to 10 per cent above January, 1934. Gains of 8 to 12 per cent over a year ago are being shown in the southwest and retail sales in the south are showing the largest percentage gain for any January since 1929.

Autos Blazing Trail.

"Still maintaining its leadership in blazing the trail to a brighter economic era, automobile plants generally are at capacity, with the increase nearly parallel in the production of steel, farm implements, electric equipment, textiles, and hardware.

"Practically all industrial branches have started the new year with the highest schedules recorded at this season since 1930, and in many divisions orders already booked amount to more than a full month's output.

"A few of the industrial indices gave ground during the week, but the recession was narrower than usual at this season, while for the basic ounces the percentage of advance was the largest for this period in three or four years."

PRICES OF HOGS SAG AS PORK DEMAND EASES

The hog market sagged 5 to 10 cents yesterday after a steady opening, and closed at the low time of the session. Additional declines in fresh pork prices, a burdensome carryover from preceding sessions this week, and a sharp setback in prices at many of the relatively high outside hog markets were the factors contributing to the break here. Receipts were light, but the fresh arrivals were augmented by about 5,000 head that accumulated as a result of the deadlock in the trade Thursday.

Prime 250 to 270 pound butchers topped the list at $10.35, off 10 cents from the season's highs registered Wednesday and Thursday, and the average for the day at $10.00 showed a loss of 5 cents.

Trading in cattle was brisk again at the high price levels established on Thursday. Only a meager run of stock arrived, and no strictly prime offerings were available, but the small supply cleared quickly at prices 50 cents to $1.00 above a week ago and $1.50 to $3.00 over a month ago.

Light yearlings averaging 967 pounds topped the list at $11.25, but salesmen said prime 1,200 to 1,300 pound steers would bring $12.00 or more. The bulk cashed within a range of $6.50 to $10.25.

Calves were weaker on light demand, with best kinds about steady at $9.00.

Lamb prices were uneven, 15 cents lower to 10 cents higher. Top sales at $9.35 to packers and shippers showed 15 cents decline.
